(314) LAKE SUPERIOR, NORTH SHORE—JACK FISH BAY—INFORMATION.

The officer in charge of the U. S. Branch Hydrographic Office at Duluth reports under date of 1st November, 1904, that the following directions for Jack Fish Bay, north shore of Lake Superior, were furnished by Captain J. B. Lyons, master of the steamer Cumberland:

Entering Jack Fish Bay keep in the centre between the rocky island on the east side and point ending in Cape Victoria, both of which objects are prominent and easily distinguished at a distance of 3 miles. If bound to the Canadian Pacific coal dock, which is situated immediately north of the island and runs in an east and west direction, direct the course to starboard as soon as well past the island, when the dock will be clearly seen, the machinery for unloading being on the south side of the dock, where 18 feet of water is found. The dock is 400 feet long. It is exposed to winds from a southerly direction, and sometimes vessels have to suspend unloading and seek shelter at the anchorage. There is not sufficient water on the north side of the dock for a loaded boat to moor if it is necessary when getting under way to break around the end of the dock. Care must be taken not to proceed too far inside on the north side, there being but 15 feet of water for a short distance from the end.

From the coal dock to the northwestward is Moberley Bay, an inlet but imperfectly surveyed and dangerous to enter unless locally acquainted.

The anchorage is found by rounding the next point to the northward of the island above mentioned and steering about northeast until Moberley Bay closes, when come to in 6 to 8 fathoms of water in a landlocked harbour.

NOTICE TO MARINERS.

No. 115 of 1904.

(Atlantic Notice No. 65.)

All bearings, unless otherwise noted, are magnetic and are given from seaward, miles are nautical miles, heights are at low high water, and all depths are at mean low water.

(308) UNITED STATES NAVAL WIRELESS TELEGRAPH SERVICE.

The following regulations governing the use of the U. S. Naval Coastwise Wireless Telegraph Stations have been established:—

1. The facilities of the naval coastwise wireless telegraph stations (including the one on the Nantucket Shoal Lightship), for communicating with ships at sea, where not in competition with private wireless telegraph stations, are placed at the service of the public generally and of maritime interests in particular under the rules established herein, which are subject to modification from time to time, for the purpose of:—

(a) Reporting vessels and intelligence received by wireless telegraphy with regard to maritime casualties, derelicts at sea and overdue vessels.

(b) Receiving wireless telegrams of a private or commercial nature from ships at sea, for further transmission by telegraph or telephone lines.

(c) Transmitting wireless telegrams to ships at sea.

2. For the present, this service will be rendered free. All messages will, however, be subject to the tariffs of the ship stations and land lines. Arrangements have been made with both the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies for forwarding messages received from ships at sea. When a message is not prepaid the company delivering it will collect the charges. Ship-owners should arrange with companies operating the land lines as to tariffs and the settlement therefor. Messages will not be accepted for transmission to ships whose owners have not agreed to accept unpaid messages, unless a sufficient sum is deposited to cover all charges.

3. The Nantucket Shoal Lightship Station will report vessels and transmit messages from them if the signals are made by the International Code, or any other known to the operators on the lightship.

4. When notified by the Weather Bureau, of the Department of Agriculture, Naval wireless telegraph stations will give storm warnings to vessels communicating with them by wireless telegraphy. Storm warnings will soon be sent to the Nantucket Shoal Lightship by wireless telegraphy, and storm signals furnished by the Weather Bureau will be displayed therefrom to warn passing vessels.

5. All vessels having the use of the Naval wireless telegraph service are requested to take daily meteorological observations of the weather when within communicating range and to transmit such observations to the Weather Bureau by wireless telegraphy at least once daily, and transmit observations oftener when there is a marked change in the barometer.

6. Arrangements for a time signal service by wireless telegraphy are now being made.

7. All ship-owners desiring to use any special code of signals for communicating with the Nantucket Shoal Lightship Station or any of the shore stations, or make any other special arrangements are requested to communicate with the Bureau of Equipment, Navy Department, Washington, D. C.

8. All Chambers of Commerce, Maritime Exchanges, newspapers, news agencies, and others desiring to have vessel reports and general marine news forwarded to them regularly are requested to communicate with the Bureau of Equipment, in order that necessary arrangements for the service may be made. In no case will an operator attached to a station be allowed to act as an agent for any individual or corporation, but all vessel reports and marine news not of a private nature will be supplied to all applicants, so long as this service does not too greatly tax the personnel of the stations, when it will be necessary for those desiring information involving much time for its distribution to appoint agents who will be allowed access to the station bulletins.

9. Naval wireless telegraph stations are equipped with apparatus of several systems and can communicate with all the principal wireless telegraph systems now in use, if tuned to the same wave length. The department is desirous of co-operating with all ship-owners wishing to avail themselves of its wireless telegraph service, and, judging from its experience with numerous systems, it is believed that there will be little or no difficulty in arranging for communication between its stations and ships equipped with apparatus of other systems, if the owners of the apparatus as well as the owners of the ships are desirous of establishing such communication.

10. Vessels desiring to make use of this service regularly must agree to transmit and receive all Government messages free.

The following stations are fully manned and will be prepared to receive messages at all hours, except in case of some accidental breakdown, which is not apt to occur because of the precautionary measures which have been taken.

The call letter is given in the column opposite the name of each station:

Navy Yard, Washington, D. C.....	QI

The Bureau of Equipment expects to erect wireless telegraph stations at the principal points along the coast of the United States and at points in its insular possessions. As fast as they are completed they will be open for public use under the regulations established herein.

Messages for the Cape Ann station should be forwarded via the Navy Yard, Portsmouth, N. H.

The Nantucket Shoal Lightship will transmit its messages to the Torpedo Station, Newport, R. I. All messages intended to be sent via this lightship to ships at sea should be sent to the Torpedo Station.

Messages for the Montauk Point wireless telegraph station will also be sent via the Torpedo Station, Newport, R. I.

Arrangements have been made with the Weather Bureau for the transmission of messages between Cape Henry wireless telegraph station and Norfolk. All messages intended for the Cape Henry station should be sent via the Weather Bureau, Norfolk, Va.

All messages intended for Dry Tortugas should be sent via the Naval Station, Key West, Fla.

The station at Yerba Buena, Cal., can be reached by either the Postal Telegraph or the Western Union system and the one at Mare Island by the Western Union.

The Farallon station will communicate with Yerba Buena Island, Cal.

Instructions to govern communication by wireless telegraphy between wireless telegraph stations and ships.

I. A vessel wishing to communicate with a station and having ascertained by "listening in" that she is not interfering with messages being exchanged within her range should make the call letter of the station at a distance not greater than 75 miles from it.

II. The call should not be continuous, but should be at intervals of about three minutes in order to give the station a chance to answer.

III. After the station answers the vessel should send her name, distance from station, weather and number of words she wishes to send; then stop until the station makes O. K., signals the number of words she wishes to send to vessel and signals go ahead.

IV. Then the vessel begins to send her messages, stopping at the end of each 50 words and waiting until the station signals O. K. and go ahead; when all messages have been sent she will so indicate. If the sender desires to designate the Western Union or Postal Telegraph system for further transmission of his message he should do so immediately after the address, as for example: "A. B. C., Washington, D. C., via W. U. (or P. T.)"

V. When a vessel has indicated that she has finished the station will send to the vessel such messages as she may have for her in the following order:

(a) Government business, viz., telegrams from any government departments to their agents on board.

(b) Business concerning the vessel with which communication has been established, viz., telegrams from owner to master.

(c) Urgent private despatches, limited.

(d) Press despatches.

(e) Other despatches.

VI. In the case of the Nantucket shoal lightship, it will, immediately on receiving the vessel's call, acknowledge, and (after receiving vessel's name, distance, weather report, and number of words she wishes to send) transmit the first three to Newport, and then tell the vessel to go ahead with her messages.

VII. After receiving these and sending the vessel any message on file for her, the lightship will transmit to Newport messages received from the communicating vessel in the following order:

(a) Government business.

(b) Urgent private despatches, limited.

(c) Press despatches.

(d) Other despatches.

VIII. A naval wireless telegraph station has the right to break in on any message being sent by a vessel at any time, and the right of way may be given at any time to a government vessel or one in distress.

IX. When two or more vessels desire to communicate with a naval wireless telegraph station at the same time, the one whose call is first received will have right of way, and the others will be told to wait and will be taken up in turn. Vessels having been told to wait must cease calling.

X. In case communication is not established with any ship for which messages are on file, the naval wireless telegraph station will notify the telegraph company from which the messages were received, giving sufficient information for them to identify the telegrams and notify the sender.

XI. In order to obtain the best results, both sending and receiving apparatus should be tuned to wave length of 320 meters.

XII. Until further notice the speed of sending should not exceed 12 words per minute.

XIII. In order that all messages received at naval wireless telegraph stations may be forwarded to ships for which they are intended, and in order that all ships equipped with wireless telegraph apparatus may receive storm warnings, they should always report when in signaling distance of a naval wireless telegraph station.

XIV. The service being without charge at present, the government accepts no responsibility for the reception or transmission of messages from or for passing vessels. Every effort will be made to transmit all messages without error and as expeditiously as possible. It must be remembered that errors are not uncommon in ordinary telegraph and cable messages, so that due allowance should be made.

XV. In order that the service may be made as good and as useful as possible, it is requested that complaints should be promptly reported to the Bureau of Equipment as soon as possible after the cause therefor, giving date, hour and other details, to enable the Bureau to investigate the case.

PRESENT :

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL
IN COUNCIL.

THE Governor General in Council is pleased to order that the rules, attached hereto, being a consolidation of the Canadian Rules for the Inspection of Steamboats and for the Examination of Engineers, along with necessary amendments, shall be and the same are hereby adopted and prescribed as the Rules for the Inspection of Steamboats and for the Examination of Engineers on and after the 1st day of January, 1905.

JOHN J. MCGEE,

RULES FOR THE INSPECTION OF STEAMBOATS AND FOR THE EXAMINATION OF ENGINEERS OF STEAMBOATS.

PART I.

Mode of Inspection.

Sec. 1. Any Inspector may, whenever he deems it necessary so to do, and one Inspector shall, at least once in every year, subject the boiler of every steamboat to a test by hydrostatic pressure, in the ratio of one hundred and fifty pounds to one hundred pounds allowable as a working pressure, using the water in such test at a temperature not exceeding sixty degrees Fahrenheit, and shall satisfy himself by examination and experimental trials that such boiler is well made of good and suitable materials. For the purpose of such test the owner of the steamboat shall provide the necessary hand-pump and apparatus, the same to be worked by the crew of the vessel; and no Inspector of boilers and machinery shall make or deliver to the owner or master of any steamboat any certificate, unless he has first subjected the boiler or boilers of such steamboat to such test by hydrostatic pressure and examination as herein prescribed.

Sec. 2. Before a boiler is subjected to a test by hydrostatic pressure, it shall be opened up for inspection, the man-hole and mud-plate doors removed, and the outside and the inside of the boiler cleaned, the furnace grates removed and the furnace swept out clean, so that satisfactory and efficient inspection may be made; when bulkheads are so placed as to prevent a close examination of the plate of the boiler, they shall be removed; and the owner or master of the steamboat shall see that the foregoing requirements are complied with before applying for inspection.

Sec. 3. In any case in which the test is not satisfactory, the defects shall be made good and the boiler re-tested satisfactorily, before a certificate is granted.

Sec. 4. Inspectors are to fix the working pressure of boilers by a series of calculations of the strength of the various parts, and according to the workmanship and material of which they are composed.

Sec. 5. Before testing a boiler the Inspectors shall examine it, take the necessary measurements and calculate what the working pressure should be, in accordance with these regulations; these instructions apply to superheaters, steam chests, and water-jackets, as well as boilers.

Sec. 6. If a boiler is too hot for an Inspector to examine it efficiently with safety and convenience, he should decline to do so, and absolutely refuse to grant a certificate until he can make a satisfactory examination.

Sec. 7. In order to satisfy himself as to strength and internal condition of the boiler, the Inspector may, should he deem it necessary, order holes to be cut in it, and may also demand that such information by drawings and specifications of the several parts be furnished him of the construction, as will enable him to determine, by calculation and examination, their strength.

Sec. 8. During the construction of every boiler intended for use on Steamboats in Canada, the maker of such boiler shall notify the Inspector of the District in which it is intended to be used, or the nearest available inspector, that it is open to his inspection, and shall, at all times during such construction allow the Inspector free access to it.

Sec. 9. To prevent questions arising after a boiler is commenced, particulars of its construction by drawings and specifications should be furnished the Inspector by the maker or contractor, for his approval as to its general design and construction; the Inspector having received such drawings or specifications, and approved of them, will be careful to see that they are followed in construction, or deductions made in accordance with Section 25. This regulation will also apply to boilers undergoing alterations.

Sec. 10. No boiler shall be made of boiler plate, whether iron or steel, which has not been stamped with the name or mark of the maker thereof; and no certificate shall be granted with respect to any boiler made wholly or in part of plate not so marked; and before a certificate shall be granted with respect to any boiler, a declaration on oath by the maker of the boiler, stating the name of the maker of the plates, their quality and the quality of all materials used in the construction of the boiler, shall be furnished the Inspector; such oath may be taken before any Justice of the Peace in Canada, or before a Notary Public and certified under his official seal, if taken out of Canada: Provided always, that in any case where such declaration on oath by the maker of the boiler cannot be obtained owing to the death of the maker, or from other causes deemed sufficient by the Inspector, the affidavit of two practical boiler-makers who have examined the boiler and reported upon the quality of the materials in it and its workmanship and strength, shall, if satisfactory to the Inspector, be deemed sufficient in lieu of such declaration by the maker of the boiler.

Sec. 11. No boiler or pipe in connection therewith shall be approved which is made in whole or in part of bad material or workmanship, or is unsafe in its form, or from age, use or from any other cause.

Sec. 12. Inspectors should see all new boilers, and boilers that have been taken out of a ship for thorough repair, tested by hydraulic pressure up to at least one and one-half of the working pressure that will be allowed, previous to the boiler being placed in the vessel, to test the workmanship, etc., but the working pressure is to be determined by the stay power, the thickness of the plate, strength of riveting, etc., and not by the hydraulic test.

Sec. 13. The hydraulic test should in no case exceed the ratio of one and one-half the working pressure allowed, and it is never to be applied until the boiler has been opened up for examination and until the strength of all the parts has been calculated from the necessary measurements taken from the boiler itself.

Sec. 14. When a boiler is partially inspected by one Inspector, and the inspection is completed and the certificate to be granted by another Inspector, if the Inspector who witnesses the test of the boiler by the hydrostatic pressure has an opportunity of examining the boiler inside and outside after the test, such Inspector shall determine the working pressure to be allowed on the boiler, taking care to inform the owner or master, or maker or agent, and the Inspector who partially inspected it, what working pressure should in his opinion be allowed, and the Inspector who partially inspected the boiler should inform the Inspector who completes the inspection of all particulars of his inspection of the boiler.

Sec. 15. Cast iron must not be used for stays in boilers; Inspectors should also discourage the use of cast iron for chocks and saddles for boilers; particular attention should be paid to chocking and fastening boilers to the vessels to guard against shifting or breaking loose.

Sec. 16. A pressure once allowed on a boiler is not, under any circumstances whatever, to be increased, unless the Inspector has previously written for and obtained the sanction of the Chairman of the "Board of Steamboat Inspection." In cases where an Inspector is of opinion that an increased pressure may with safety be allowed, he should communicate with the Inspector who last inspected the boiler, and if on learning why the existing pressure was formerly allowed, the Inspector is still of opinion that it may be increased, he should communicate all the facts of the case to the Chairman; but, as above stated, the pressure should not, in any case, be increased until the question has been decided by the Chairman.

Sec. 17. In the event of any novelty in construction of a boiler, or of any departure from the practice of staying and strengthening as prescribed in these rules and regulations, the Inspector shall report full particulars to the Chairman before fixing the working pressure.

Sec. 18. An Inspector shall not declare a boiler safe unless he is fully informed as to its construction, material and workmanship. He should, therefore, be very careful how he ventures to give a certificate for a boiler that he is not called in to inspect until after it is completed and fixed in the ship.

Sec. 19. In the case of new boilers, the Inspector may allow a stress not exceeding 7,000 pounds per square inch of net section on solid iron screw stays supporting flat surfaces, but the stress should not exceed 6,000 pounds when the stays have been welded or worked in the fire.

Sec. 20. (a) The pressure on plates forming flat surfaces is found by the following formula:—

$$\frac{C \times (T + 1)^2}{S - 6} = \text{Working pressure.}$$

T = Thickness of plate in sixteenths of an inch.

S = Surface supported in square inches.

C = Constant according to the following circumstances:—

C = 100 when the plates are not exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and the stays are fitted with nuts and washers, the latter being at least three times the diameter of the stay and two-thirds the thickness of the plate they cover.

C = 90 when the plates are not exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and the stays are fitted with nuts only.

C = 70 when the plates are not exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and the stays screwed into the plates, having the ends riveted over to form substantial heads.

C = 60 when the plates are exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and the steam in contact with the plates, and the stays fitted with nuts and washers, the latter being at least three times the diameter of the stay, and two-thirds the thickness of the plates they cover.

C = 54 when the plates are exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and steam in contact with the plates, and the stays fitted with nuts only.

(b.) If the diameter of riveted washers be at least two-thirds the pitch of the stays, and the thickness not less than the plates they cover, the constants may be increased to 150.

(c.) When doubling plates are fitted of the same thickness of the plates they cover, and not less in width than two-thirds the pitch of the stays, the constants may be increased to 160.

(d.) When doubling plates cover the whole of the flat surfaces, of a thickness not greater than the plates covered, nor less than two-thirds of their thickness, and being securely riveted to them; the strength to be taken from where t = thickness of doubling plate in sixteenths C = 140 for iron, and 175 for steel plates. T and S, same as above.

$$\frac{C + (T + \frac{1}{2})^2}{S} \text{ working pressure in lbs. per square inch.}$$

C = 80 when the plates are exposed to the impact of heat or flame, with water in contact with the plates, and the stays screwed into the plates and fitted with nuts.

C = 60 when the plates are exposed to the impact of heat or flame, with water in contact with the plates, and the stays screwed into the plates, having the ends riveted over to form substantial heads.

C = 36 when the plates are exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and steam in contact with the plates, and the stays screwed into the plates, and having the ends riveted over to form substantial heads.

(e.) In cases where plates are stiffened by T or L irons, and a greater pressure is required for the plate than is allowed by the use of the above constants, the case should be submitted for the consideration of the Chairman.

(f.) When the riveted ends of the screw stays are much worn, or when the nuts are burned, the constants should be reduced, but the Inspector must act according to the circumstances that present themselves at the time of the inspection, and it is expected that in cases where the riveted ends of screw stays in the combustion boxes and furnaces are found in this state it will be often necessary to reduce the constant from 60 to 36.

(g.) Flat steel plates, which are in no way exposed to the action of the fire or hot gases and stayed with stays, having nuts with washers at least in diameter one-third pitch of stays, and half the thickness of plate, the working pressure to be allowed may be found by the following formula:—

$$48000 \times \frac{T^2}{P^2} = W. P.$$

T = Thickness plate in inches.

P = Greatest pitch of stay bolts in inches.

Sec. 21. Inspectors should not in any case allow a greater compressive stress on the tube plates than 9,000 pounds, which is that used in the following formula:—

$$\frac{(D-d) T \times 18,000}{W \times D} = \text{Working pressure.}$$

D = Least horizontal distance between centres of tubes in inches.

d = Inside diameter of ordinary tube in inches.

T = Thickness of tube plate in inches.

W = Width of combustion box in inches between the tube plate and back of fire box, or distance between the combustion box tube plates when the boiler is double-ended and the box common to the furnaces at both ends.

Sec. 22. When stays prevent an Inspector from getting inside a boiler, he must order their removal, and he must see them properly replaced before granting a certificate.

Sec. 23. In the case of ordinary zig-zag riveting the strength through the plate diagonally between the rivets is equal to that horizontally between the rivets, when the diagonal pitch equals six-tenths the horizontal pitch plus four-tenths the diameter of the rivet.

Sec. 24. When the outside of the bottom of a boiler cannot be otherwise thoroughly inspected, the boiler should be lifted once at least in every four years.

Construction of Boilers.

Sec. 25. (a.) When cylindrical boilers or the cylindrical parts of boilers composed of iron plates are made of the best material with all the rivet holes drilled in place and all the seams fitted with double butt straps, each of at least five-eighths the thickness of the plates they cover, and all the seams at least double riveted with rivets having an allowance of not more than 75 per cent over the single shear, and provided that the boilers have been open to inspection, then 4.5 may be used as the factor of safety. The tensile strength of the material is to be taken as equal to 47,000 pounds per square inch with the grain, and 40,000 pounds across the grain. When the above conditions are not complied with, the addition, in the following scale, must be added to the factor, according to the circumstances of each case:—

- A.15—To be added when all the holes are fair and good in the longitudinal seams, but drilled out of place after bending.
- B.3—To be added when all the holes are fair and good in the longitudinal seams, but drilled out of place before bending.
- C.3—To be added when all the holes are fair and good in the longitudinal seams, but punched after bending instead of drilled.
- D.5—To be added when all the holes are fair and good in the longitudinal seams, but punched before bending.
- E*.75—To be added when all the holes are not fair and good in the longitudinal seams.
- F.1—To be added if the holes are all fair and good in the circumferential seams, but drilled out of place after bending.
- G.15—To be added if the holes are fair and good in the circumferential seams, but drilled before bending.
- H.15—To be added if the holes are fair and good in the circumferential seams, but punched after bending.
- I.2—To be added if the holes are fair and good in the circumferential seams, but punched before bending.
- J*.2—To be added if the holes are not fair and good in the circumferential seams.
- K.2—To be added if double butt straps are not fitted to the longitudinal seams, and the said seams are lapped and double riveted.
- L.1—To be added if double butt straps are not fitted to the longitudinal seams, and the said seams are lapped and treble riveted.
- M.3—To be added if only single butt straps are fitted to the longitudinal seams, and the said seams are double riveted.
- N.15—To be added if only single butt straps are fitted to the longitudinal seams, and the said seams are treble riveted.
- O1.0—To be added when any description of joint in the longitudinal seams is single riveted.
- P†.1—To be added if the circumferential seams are fitted with single butt straps and are double riveted.
- Q†.2—To be added if the circumferential seams are fitted with single butt straps and are single riveted.
- R†.1—To be added if the circumferential seams are fitted with double butt straps and are single riveted.
- S†.1—To be added if the circumferential seams are lapped joints and are double riveted.
- T.2—To be added if the circumferential seams are lapped joints and are single riveted.
- U.25—To be added when the circumferential seams are lapped, and the strakes of plates are not entirely under or over.
- V.3—To be added when the boiler is of such a length as to fire from both ends, or is of unusual length, such as flue boilers; and the circumferential seams are fitted as described opposite P., R. and S., but of course when the circumferential seams are as described opposite Q. and T., V.3 will become V.4.
- W*.4—To be added if the seams are not properly crossed.
- X*.4—To be added when the iron is in any way doubtful, and the Inspector is not satisfied that it is of the best quality.
- Y†.65—To be added if the boiler is not open for inspection during the whole period of its construction.

(b.) The strength of ordinary joints is found by the following method:—

$$\frac{(\text{Pitch} - \text{Diameter of rivet hole}) \times 100}{\text{Pitch}} = \text{Percentage of strength of plate at joint as compared with the solid plate. **}$$

$$\frac{(\text{Area of rivets} \times \text{No. of rows of rivets}) \times 100}{\text{Pitch} \times \text{thickness of plate}} = \text{Percentage of strength of rivets as compared with the solid plate. ††}$$

(c.) Where marked * the allowance may be increased still further if the workmanship or material is very doubtful or unsatisfactory.

* For the maximum pitch of rivets see Section 43.

†† If the rivets are exposed to double shear, multiply the percentage as found by 1.75.

‡ When inspecting boilers that have not been open to inspection during construction, the case should be submitted to the Chairman as to the factors to be used.

† P†.1, Q†.2, R†.1, S†.1, shall not apply to the end or circumferential seams, if such seams are sufficiently stayed by through bolts; nor to the seams between the square and round part of the shell, in cylindrical boilers with square furnaces, when such seams are double riveted.

(d.) Then take iron as equal in tensile strength to 47,000 pounds per square inch and use the smallest of the two percentages as the strength of the joint, and adopt the factor of safety as found from the preceding scale:—

$$\frac{47,000 \times \text{percentage of strength of joint} \times \text{twice the thickness of the plate in inches}}{\text{Inside diameter of boiler in inches} \times \text{factor of safety}} = \text{Pressure to be allowed per square inch on the safety-valves.}$$

(e.) Plates that are drilled in place must be taken apart and the burr taken off and the holes slightly countersunk from the outside.

(f.) Butt straps must be cut from plates and not from bars, and must be of as good quality as the shell plate, and for the longitudinal seams must be cut across the fibre.

(g.) The rivet holes may be punched or drilled when the plates are punched or drilled out of place, but when drilled in place, must be taken apart and the burr taken off and slightly countersunk from the outside.

(h.) When single butt straps are used and the rivet holes in them punched, they must be one-eighth thicker than the plates they cover.

(i.) The diameter of rivets must not be less than the thickness of the plate of which the shell is made, but it will be found when the plates are thin, or when lap joints or single butt straps are adopted, that the diameter of the rivets should be in excess of the thickness of the plate.

* Formulæ for the riveted joints and maximum pitches of rivets and also diagrams of different descriptions of riveted joints will be found in the Appendix and Section 43.

(j.) The distance of the rivet holes from the end or edge of the plates shall not be less than the diameter of the rivets.

(k.) Dished ends that are not truly hemispherical must be stayed; if they are not theoretically equal in strength to the pressure needed they must be stayed as flat surfaces, but if they are theoretically equal in strength to the pressure needed the stays may have a strain of 10,000 lbs. per effective square inch of sectional area.

* Steam drums having a segmental or spherical head at each end, of a radius not greater than the diameter of drum to which attached, and not exposed to the impact of heat and flame, may be passed without stays, if theoretically equal in strength to the following formula:—

C = Tensile strength of plate in lbs.

T = Thickness of plate in inches.

R = Radius of head in inches.

F = 4 when heads are pressed into shape by machine and annealed, and 5 when heads are worked by hand into shape and annealed.

$$\frac{C \times T}{R \times F} = \text{Allowable working pressure.}$$

(L.) Inspectors will remember that the strength of a sphere to resist internal pressure is double that of a cylinder of the same diameter and thickness.

Sec. 26. (a.) The neutral parts of boiler shells under steam domes must be sufficiently stiffened and stayed.

(b.) The sides of boilers having square furnaces and half round tops must be stayed from side to side of the shell, over the furnace, one or more rows of these stays to be placed well above the centre of the cylindrical part.

(c.) Screw stays are not to be used when supporting flat surfaces at any angle but a right angle to the surface supported, their diameter to be measured inside the thread, and when supporting crowns of furnaces or combustion box crowns should be secured with nuts and when not so secured, the constant C 36 is to be used for determining the allowable working pressure on the plate supported; but if such plates are of less thickness than three-eighths of an inch, the stays must be nutted.

(d.) The longitudinal seams in the cylindrical shell of boilers should be as far as possible from the bottom.

(e.) The inside diameter of the outside strake or course in the cylindrical shell of a boiler is to be taken as the measure of its diameter.

Sec. 27. (a.) In cylindrical superheaters the strength of the joints and the factor of safety is found in a similar manner as for cylindrical boilers and steam receivers, but instead of using 47,000 pounds as the tensile strength of iron, 30,000 pounds is adopted, unless where the heat or flame impinges at or nearly at right angles to the plate, then 22,400 pounds is substituted.

(b.) In all cases the internal steam pipes should be so fitted that the steam in flowing to them will pass over all the plates exposed to the impact of heat or flame.

(c.) Superheaters or water-jackets should, as regards inspection, be deemed to be the most important part of the boilers, and must be inspected inside and outside; those that cannot be entered (on account of their size) must have a sufficient number of doors through which a thorough inspection of the whole of the interior can be made.

(d.) Special attention should be paid to the inspection of superheaters, as with high pressure the plates may become dangerously weak and not give any sound to indicate their state when tested with the hammer; the plate should, therefore, be occasionally drilled. Drain pipes must be in all cases fitted to superheaters in which a collection of water in the bottom is possible.

(e.) Superheaters that can be shut off from the main boiler must be fitted with a Government lock-up safety valve of sufficient size, but the least size passed shall not be less than two inches in diameter.

Sec. 28. The areas of diagonal stays are found in the following way:—

Find the area of a direct stay needed to support the surface, multiply this area by the length of the diagonal stay and divide the product by the length of a line drawn at right angles to the surface supported to the end of the diagonal stay, the quotient will be the area of the diagonal stay required.

When gusset stays are used, their area should be in excess of that found in the above way.

Sec. 29. (a.) When the tops of combustion boxes or other parts of a boiler are supported by solid rectangular girders, the following formula, which is used by the Imperial Board of Trade, will be useful for finding the working pressure to be allowed on the girders, assuming that they are not subjected to a greater temperature than the ordinary heat of steam, and the ends fitted to the edges of the tube plate and the back plate of the combustion box:

$$\frac{C \times d^2 \times T}{(W-P) D \times N} = \text{Working pressure.}$$

W=Width of combustion box in inches.

P=Pitch of supporting bolts in inches.

D=Distance between the girders from centre to centre in inches.

L=Length of girder in feet.

d=Depth of girder in inches.

T=Thickness of girder in inches.

N=Number of supporting bolts.

$$C = \frac{N \times 1000}{N + 1} = \text{when the number of bolts is odd.}$$

$$C = \frac{(N + 1) 1000}{N + 2} = \text{when the number of bolts is even.}$$

(b.) The working pressure for the supporting bolts, and for the plate between them, shall be determined by the rules for ordinary stays and plates.

Sec. 30. The flat ends of all boilers, as far as the steam space extends, and the ends of superheaters should be fitted with shield, or baffle plates, where exposed to the hot gases of the up-take, as all the plates subjected to the direct impact of heat or flame are liable to injury, unless covered with water.

When a superheater is constructed with a tube subject to external pressure, the working pressure should be ascertained by the rules given for circular iron furnaces, but the constants should be reduced as thirty is to forty-seven:

If steel is proposed to be used in superheaters, the particulars should be submitted to the Board of Steamboat Inspection or to the Chairman, if the Board is not sitting, for consideration, but in all cases it should be discouraged for this purpose; this applies to the unshielded up-takes of all boilers, including ordinary vertical donkey boilers.

Sec. 31. Donkey boilers that are in any way attached to, or connected with the main boilers, or with the machinery used for propelling the ship, must be inspected and fitted the same way as the main boilers, and must have a water and steam gauge, and all other fittings complete, and as regards safety-valves, must comply with the same regulations as the main boilers, and no safety-valve shall be passed except as hereinafter provided by the rules relating to the inspection of safety-valves.

Sec. 32. (a.) No boiler or steam chamber is to be so constructed, fitted or arranged as that the escape of steam from it through the safety-valve can be wholly or partially intercepted by the action of any other valve,

(b.) A stop valve must always be fitted between the boiler and the steam pipe, and (when two or more boilers are connected with a steam receiver or super-heater) between each boiler and superheater or steam receiver. The object of this is obvious, viz., to avoid the failure of all the boilers through the failure of one. The necks of stop valves should be as short as practicable.

Sec. 33. (a.) Each boiler must be fitted with glass water gauge, at least two test cocks, and steam gauge, that is to say, each boiler must be fitted with all the fittings as complete as if there was only one boiler.

(b.) Boilers that fire at both ends, and those of unusual width, must have water gauges and test cocks at each end or side, as the case may be. When a steamer has more than one boiler, and those boilers are fitted with stop valves, each boiler must be treated as a separate one, and have all the requisite fittings.

Sec. 34. Inspectors shall be most careful not to give any official sanction to any new arrangement or construction of marine steam boilers without first obtaining the permission of the Chairman in writing, nor shall they give any written approval of any invention or arrangement unless by direction of the Chairman, and whenever they know that any invention or new arrangement is to be fitted to a vessel that is intended to have a passenger certificate, they shall as soon as possible obtain plans and specifications and submit the same to the Chairman.

Sec. 35. Circular furnaces with the longitudinal joints welded or made with a butt strap double riveted, or double butt straps single riveted:—

$$90,000 \times \frac{\text{the square of the thickness of the plate in inches.}}{(\text{Length in feet} + 1) \text{ diameter in inches.}}$$

= working pressure per square inch, provided it does not exceed that found by the following formula:—

$$\frac{9,000 \times \text{thickness in inches.}}{\text{diameter in inches.}} = \text{Working pressure per square inch.}$$

The second formula limits the crushing stress on the material to 4,500 lbs. per square inch.

The length is to be measured between the rings if the furnace is made with rings.

When the longitudinal joints are not welded or made with a butt strap, the following constants will be substituted for 90,000:

(a.) Furnaces with butt joints and drilled rivet holes. { 90,000 where the longitudinal seams are double riveted and fitted with single butt straps; 80,000 where the longitudinal seams are single riveted and fitted with single butt straps; 90,000 where the longitudinal seams are single riveted and fitted with double butt straps.

(b.) Furnaces with butt joints and punched rivet holes. { 85,000 where the longitudinal seams are double riveted and fitted with single butt straps; 75,000 where the longitudinal seams are single riveted and fitted with single butt straps; 85,000 where the longitudinal seams are single riveted and fitted with double butt straps.

(c.) Furnaces with lapped joints and drilled rivet holes. { 80,000 where the longitudinal seams are double riveted and bevelled; 75,000 where the longitudinal seams are double riveted and not bevelled; 70,000 where the longitudinal seams are single riveted and bevelled; 65,000 where the longitudinal seams are single riveted and not bevelled.

(d.) Furnaces with lapped joints and punched rivet holes. { 75,000 where the longitudinal seams are double riveted and bevelled; 70,000 where the longitudinal seams are double riveted and not bevelled; 65,000 where the longitudinal seams are single riveted and bevelled; 60,000 where the longitudinal seams are single riveted and not bevelled.

In the case of upright fireboxes of donkey or similar boilers, 10 per cent. should be deducted from the constant given above, applicable to the respective classes of work.

Steel Boilers.

Sec. 36. (a.) The following rules should guide Inspectors when the general quality of the steel has been found suitable for marine boilers:—

(b.) The steel makers or boiler makers should test one or more strips or pieces cut from each plate and bar for tensile strength and elongation, and stamp both results on each plate or bar. When practicable the plates or bars should be so stamped that the marks can be easily seen when the boiler is constructed.

(c.) An Inspector is not obliged to witness the foregoing test, but he should see that all the plates and bars are properly stamped.

(d.) From the plates and bars, the tests of which have been stated to have been made by the steel maker, and not witnessed by the Inspector, the Inspector may, if he thinks it advisable, select any plate or bars after they are in the boiler shop and require specimens to be cut off and tested. If the results are not satisfactory, the whole of the plates, except those which were tested and found satisfactory by the Inspector, may be liable to be rejected.

(e.) Twenty-five per cent of the rivet bars should be tested for tensile strength and elongation, the tensile strength should be from 26 to 30 tons gross, to the square inch, and the elongation in ten inches should not be less than 25 per cent.

(f.) The Inspector may not in every case see some of the rivets tested, but he should occasionally select a few, and after they are prepared, see them tested. The tensile stress should be from 27 to 32 tons gross, to the square inch, with a contraction of area of 60 per cent. The elongation should when practicable be taken in length equal to two and a half times the diameter of the prepared part.

(g.) Twenty-five per cent of the bars for stays of each size should be tested, solid screw stays which have not been welded or otherwise worked after heating, may be allowed a working stress of 9,000 pounds to the square inch, of net section. And for other stays exceeding one and one-half inches smallest-diameter 10,000 pounds per square inch may be allowed; provided the tensile stress is from 27 to 32 tons gross per square inch, and the elongation in ten inches about 25 per cent, and not less than 20 per cent.

The tensile strength of strips to form stay tubes should be from 26 to 30 tons gross per square inch, with an elongation of about 25 per cent., but not less than 20 per cent, in a length of 10 inches. Stay tubes made of steel which comply with this requirement, may be allowed a stress not exceeding 7,500 lbs. per square inch of net section, providing their net thickness is in no case less than $\frac{1}{4}$ inch.

(h.) Steel stays which have been welded or worked in the fire have been found to be unreliable, therefore they should not be passed.

(i.) If the original size of the bars for rivets or stays be reduced before testing it should be done in the lathe or by a machine; test pieces of any kind should not be prepared by heating and drawing down.

(j.) The Inspector is not obliged to witness the prescribed tests, although it is very desirable that he should when his other duties will allow him to do so, but he should see that all the plates are properly marked. He should, however, select of each thickness at least one in four of the plates, to be used in the construction of the boiler and witness the testing of at least one strip or piece cut from each selected plate, but when boiler plates exceed 15 feet in length, there should be a tensile test from each end, and when they exceed 20 feet in length and at the same time exceed 6 feet in breadth, or exceed $2\frac{1}{2}$ tons in weight, there should be a tensile test from each corner. In the latter cases the testing of each plate should be witnessed by the Inspector. The mean of the results of the tests, if the latter fall within the Board's requirement, as stated below, should be stamped on the plates. If a large number of failures take place in the 25 per cent. selected, the Inspector should select and see tested an additional number of plates, the number of additional tests being proportional to the number of failures. If for the plates from which the Inspectors select the above proportion, a greater stress is wished than is allowed for iron, tests for tensile strength and elongation should be made, also a few tempering and bending tests, and those for which no reduction of thickness is asked may be tested for resistance to bending and tempering only, if preferred. In the latter case, the tensile strength and elongation stamped on each plate should be stated in the report by the Inspector to the Chairman, together with the results of the bending and tempering tests. From the plates, the tests of which have been made by the steel maker, and not witnessed by the Inspector, the Inspector may, if he thinks it advisable, select any plates after they are in the boiler yard and require specimens to be cut off and tested. If the results are not satisfactory the whole of the plates except those which were tested and found satisfactory by the Inspector, may be liable to be rejected.

(k.) The breadth of test strips for tensile stress should be, where practicable, 2 inches, and the elongation taken in a length of 10 inches should be about 25 per cent., and not less than 18 per cent. when the strips are tested in the normal condition, in which condition the Board prefer the tests to be made; but if the plates are annealed, that is, heated to a red heat in a plate furnace, and immediately they are at that heat taken out and placed on the mill floor to cool, the elongation should not be less than 20 per cent. The test pieces must not be annealed after they are cut off the plates. When the plates are not taken out of the furnace immediately they are red hot, or if allowed to cool down in the furnace, or are covered with ashes or other non-conducting substance, it should be reported to the Chairman for his consideration and decision. The Inspector should report to the Chairman whether the plates were annealed, or in the normal condition when the test pieces were cut off. The test strips must be carefully prepared and measured, and where practicable, they should be cut from the plate by a planing or shaping machine.

The Inspector should see that the plates for the manhole doors and for the compensating rings around the openings or the doors are tested in the usual manner.

(l.) The bending tests for plates not exposed to flame should be made with strips in their normal condition, and occasionally also some tempering test. Strips cut from furnaces, combustion boxes, &c., should be heated to a cherry red, then plunged into water of about 80 degrees and kept there until of the same temperature as the water and then bent. The bending and tempering strips should be about two inches broad and ten inches long, and they should be bent until they break, or until the sides are parallel at a distance from each other of not more than (3) three times the thickness of plate.

(m.) When any allowance over iron is wished, the tensile stress of the plates not exposed to flame should be not less than 27 tons gross, and should not exceed 32 tons gross, per square inch of section, and 27 tons gross, should be the stress used in the calculations for cylindrical shells, if the plates comply with all the conditions as stated herein, but for each ton the minimum tensile strength of the plates is above 27 tons, 1 ton may be added to the 27 used in the calculations, provided the Inspector witnesses the testing of all the plates. Plates having the stamp or brand marked thereon by the surveyors of British Board of Trade, Lloyds, or British Corporation, may be accepted; providing the bending and tempering tests are satisfactory, and that the proper official declaration of the tensile tests made and record of same are furnished, and comply with the requirements as herein stated. The tensile strength of furnace, flanging and combustion box plates may range from 26 to 30 tons gross per square inch.

(n.) All plates that are punched, flanged or locally heated must be carefully annealed after being so treated.

(o.) The rivet holes in the furnaces and shell seams should be drilled, but if it is wished to punch them and afterwards bore out the holes or if it is wished to anneal the plates the particulars of the punching and boring or annealing should be submitted to the Chairman for consideration before being done, but all punched holes should be made after bending.

(p.) In all cases where assent has been given by the Chairman for plates to be punched after bending, and then annealed, the maker of the boiler should stamp the plates with the words "punched after bending and then annealed," and in all cases where assent has been given for punching and afterwards boring plates the words "punched and then bored" should be stamped on the plates.

(q.) If the flanging plates and those exposed to flame comply with the foregoing conditions, the constants in these rules for iron boilers may be increased as follows:—

1. The constants for flat surfaces, when they are supported by stays screwed into the plates and riveted, 10 per cent.

2. The constants for flat surfaces, when they are supported by stays screwed into the plates and nutted, or when the stays are nutted in the steam space, 25 per cent. This is also applicable to the constants for flat surfaces stiffened by riveted washers or doubling strips and supported by nutted stays.

3. The constants for combustion box girders, 10 per cent.

(r.) Tube plates of upright boilers must be sufficiently stayed with stay tubes, also all boilers where deemed necessary by the Inspector; and in boilers intended for a working pressure of 120 lbs. per sq. inch and upwards, the tube plates should be stayed.

For steel tube plates in the nest of tubes the strength of plates is found by the following formula:

$$\frac{140 \times T^2}{P^2} = \text{Working pressure in lbs. per sq. inch.}$$ where T = the thickness of the plates in sixteenths of an inch,

P = the mean pitch of stay tubes from centre to centre.

For the wide water spaces between the nests of tubes the strength to be taken from $$\frac{C \times T^2}{P^2} = \text{working pressure in lbs. per sq. inch.}$$

where P = the horizontal distance from centre to centre of the bounding rows of tubes, and

C = 120 where the stay tubes are pitched with two plain tubes between them and are not fitted with nuts outside the plates,

C = 130 if they are fitted with nuts outside the plates,

C = 140 if each alternate tube is a stay tube not fitted with nuts,

C = 150 if they are fitted with nuts outside the plates,

C = 160 if every tube in these rows is a stay tube and not fitted with nuts,

C = 170 if every tube in these rows is a stay tube and each alternate stay tube is fitted with nuts outside the plates.

Where the flat plates in wide water spaces between the nests of tubes are strengthened with doubling plates, securely riveted to them, having a thickness of not less than two-thirds of that of the plates, the strength to be taken from following formula: where t = thickness of doubling in sixteenths, and C , T and P are as above.

$$\frac{C \times (T + \frac{1}{2})^2}{P^2} = \text{working pressure in lbs. per sq. inch:}$$

(s.) A greater compressive stress should not be allowed on tube plates than 14,000 lbs. to the square inch, which is that used in the following formula:—

$$\frac{(D-d) T \times 28,000}{W \times D} = \text{Working pressure.}$$

D = Least horizontal distance between centres of tubes in inches.

d = Inside diameter of ordinary tubes in inches.

T = Thickness of tube plate in inches.

W = Width of combustion box in inches between the tube plate and back of fire box, or distance between the combustion box tube plates when the boiler is double ended and the box common to the furnaces at both ends.

(t.) The rivet section, if of iron, in the longitudinal seams of cylindrical shells, where lapped and at least double riveted, should not be less than $\frac{1}{3}$ times the net plate section; but if steel rivets are used, their section should be at least $\frac{2}{3}$ of the net section of the plate if the tensile stress of the rivet is not less than 27 tons gross and not more than 32 tons gross per square inch. Therefore, in calculating the working pressure, the percentage strength of the rivets may be found in the usual way by the rules, but in the case of iron rivets the percentages found should be divided by $\frac{1}{3}$, and in the case of steel rivets by $\frac{2}{3}$, the result being the percentages required. If the percentage strength of the rivets by calculation is less than the calculated percentage strength of the plate, calculate the working pressure by both percentages. When using the percentage strength of the plate, 4.25 plus the additions, suitable for the method of construction as by the rules for iron boilers, may be used as the nominal factor of safety, but when using the percentage strength of the rivets, 4.25 may be used as the factor of safety. The less of the two pressures so found is the working pressure to be allowed for the cylindrical portion of the shell, or otherwise in accordance with the formulae in appendix. Sec. 43.

(u.) Local heating of the plates should be avoided, as many plates have failed from being so treated.

(v.) Steel plates which have been welded should not be passed if subject to a tensile stress, and those welded and subject to a compressive stress should be sufficiently annealed. In other respects the boiler should comply with the rules for iron boilers.

Sec. 37. In no case shall a certificate be granted for a boiler, when drift pins have been used in bringing the holes in the sheets together.

Sec. 38. Man-hole openings must be stiffened with compensating plates or rings of at least the same effective sectional area as the plate cut out, and in no case shall such plates or rings be of less thickness than the plate to which they are attached, nor the attachment of less strength than the plate or ring. All openings in the shells of boilers should have their short axis placed longitudinally, and if not so placed must have compensating plates or rings, and attachments, equal to twice the effective sectional area of the plate cut out.

Where cast iron frames are fastened around man-holes in steamboat boilers, a compensating ring in addition must be provided.

Mud-holes or hand-holes should not be placed in boiler shells of a greater short diameter than five inches, unless provided with reinforcing plates, and if on the cylindrical shell of a boiler, their short diameter should be in a line with the axis of the shell.

Sec. 39. Every boiler made after the coming into force of these regulations, shall be stamped with the initial letters of the Inspector's name who inspected and tested it, the year it was made and the pressure under which it was tested, also the actual working pressure allowed upon it.

Furnaces and Flues.

Sec. 40. (a.) The external working pressure to be allowed on plane circular steel furnaces and flues, when subjected to such pressure when the longitudinal joints are welded or made with a butt strap, shall be determined by the following formula:

(b.) The product of 90,000 multiplied by the square of the thickness of the plate in inches, divided by the length of the flue, or furnace, in feet, plus one multiplied by the diameter in inches, will be the allowable working pressure per square inch in pounds, adding ten per cent to the result of the formula; provided it does not exceed that found by the following formula: (c)

$$\frac{90,000 \times T^2}{(L + 1) \times D} = \text{Working pressure, where}$$

T = Thickness of plate in inches.

D = Diameter of flue outside in inches.

L = Length of flue or furnace in feet, or the length between the rings in feet, if it is strengthened by suitable rings or Adamson joints.

(c.) The product of 10,000 multiplied by the thickness of the plate in inches, divided by the diameter (outside) of the flue or furnace, in inches, will be the allowable working pressure per square inch in pounds.

(d.) When the horizontal furnaces of ordinary diameter are constructed of a series of rings welded longitudinally, and the ends of each ring flanged and the rings riveted together, and so forming the furnace, the working pressure is found by the following formula, provided the length in inches between the centres of the flanges of the rings is not greater than $(120 T - 12)$ and the flanging performed at one heat by a suitable flanging machine, and also the conditions which follow the formula are complied with.

T = Thickness of plate in inches.

L = Length between centre of flanges in inches.

D = Outside diameter of furnace in inches.

The radii of the flanges on the fire side should be about $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches. The depth of the flanges from the fire side should be three times the diameter of the rivet plus $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches, and the thickness of the flanges should be as near the thickness of the body of the plate as practicable. The distance from the edge of the rivet holes to the edge of the flange should not be less than the diameter of the rivet, and the diameter of the rivets at least $\frac{3}{8}$ inch greater than the thickness of the plate. The depth of the ring between the flanges should be not less than three times the diameter of the rivets, the fire edge of the ring should be at about the termination of the curve of the flange, and the thickness not less than half the thickness of the furnace plate. It is very desirable that these rings should be turned.

The holes in the flanges and rings should be drilled in place if practicable, but if not drilled in place they should be drilled smaller than the size required, and afterwards when in place rimmed out until the holes are quite fair, the holes should be slightly tapered and the heads of the rivets of moderate size.

After all the welding, flanging and heating is completed each ring should be efficiently annealed in one operation.

(e.) When the longitudinal seams in such furnaces are made with a single butt strap double riveted, or double butt straps single riveted, with all holes drilled in place, and the flanging of the ends is performed by hand "and then annealed" instead of at one heat by a flanging machine, with all other conditions as to construction as described in subsec. (d) being complied with, then 8800 is to be substituted in place of 9900 in the formula, subsec. (d).

Corrugated Steel Furnaces and Flues.

Sec. 41. (a.) In steel flue furnaces when new, corrugated, and machine made, of the Fox corrugated and Morrison suspension types, or the John Brown & Co., or of the Purves ribbed and grooved type, or the Deighton and Fox type, if they are practically true circles, and the plates not less than 5-16 inch thick, the working pressure is found by the following formula:

$$\frac{C \times T}{D} = \text{Working pressure.}$$

C = 14,000.

T = Thickness in inches.

D = Outside diameter in inches, measured at the bottom of the corrugations when the furnace is of the corrugated or suspension type, or over the plain parts when it is of the ribbed and grooved description.

In Fox's corrugated furnaces the pitch of the corrugations should not exceed 6 inches, and in Morrison's suspension furnace and the Deighton furnace the pitch should not exceed 8 inches. In these descriptions of furnaces the depth from top of corrugations outside to bottom of corrugations inside should not be less than 2 inches.

The ribs of ribbed and grooved furnaces should not be less than $1\frac{1}{8}$ inches above the plain parts, the depth of the grooves not more than $\frac{3}{4}$ inch, and the length between the centre of the ribs not over 9 inches. In each of these descriptions of furnaces the plain parts at the back ends should be so made that the length, measured from the waterside of the back tube plate to the centre of the back end corrugation or rib, does not exceed 9 inches. The plain parts at the front ends should also be so made that the length, measured from the centre of the first corrugation or rib, to the centre of the rivets by which the furnace is secured to the front end plate, does not exceed 9 inches. When the plain parts at the back ends are made conical, and the flange by which the attachment is made to the back tube plate is continuous, a length of $10\frac{1}{2}$ inches may be allowed between the waterside of the back tube plate and the centre of the first corrugation or rib. When this method of construction is adopted, the vertical section through the neck-piece should be kept as circular as is practicable. The set up at the bottom should not exceed 8 inches measured over the plates, and in no case should the vertical axis exceed the horizontal one by more than 14 per cent. The plates at the ends should not be unduly thinned in the flanging.

(b.) When the furnaces are riveted in two or more lengths the case should be submitted to the Chairman for consideration, as it may be necessary to make a reduction.

Corrugated Iron Furnaces.

Sec. 42. The working pressure for corrugated iron furnaces practically circular and machine made, provided the plane parts at the ends do not exceed 6 inches in length and the plates are not less than $\frac{5}{16}$ inch thick, should not be greater than that found by the following formula:—

$$\frac{10,000 \times \text{thickness in inches}}{\text{Mean diameter in inches}} = \text{Working pressure.}$$

When joints are used in boiler construction other than those shown in the attached sketches, or when any of the rivets are pitched less than two diameters apart, the particulars of such joints should be submitted for the consideration of the Board.

MAXIMUM PITCHES FOR RIVETED JOINTS.

T = Thickness of plate in inches.

p = Maximum pitch of rivets in inches, provided it does not exceed 10 inches.

C = Constant applicable from the following table.

Number of Rivets in one Pitch.	Constants for Lap Joints.	Constants for Double Butt Strap Joints.
1	1.31	1.75
2	2.62	3.50
3	3.47	4.63
4	4.14	5.52
5	—	6.00

$$(C \times T) + 1\frac{1}{8} = p.$$

When the work is first class, such pitches may be adopted so far as safety is concerned, yet, in some cases, it may be well not to adopt the greatest pitch found by the formula. The maximum pitch should not, however, exceed 10 inches with the thickest plates for boiler shells. If in any case the pitch is found to exceed that arrived at by the foregoing formula, for the particular description of joint and thickness of plate, such pitches should not be passed, but all such cases should be reported.

PART II.

REGULATIONS GOVERNING THE INSPECTION AND TESTING OF BOILERS NOW IN EXISTENCE AND OF BOILERS NOW OR HEREFTER TO BE MANUFACTURED, IN CANADA, FOR THE USE OF STEAMBOATS, WHENEVER IN THE OPINION OF THE INSPECTOR THE REGULATIONS CONTAINED IN PART ONE OF THESE REGULATIONS, ON ACCOUNT OF THE MAKE OF SUCH BOILERS, OR FOR SOME OTHER REASON, NOT CAPABLE OF APPLICATION IN THE TESTING THEREOF; PROVIDED THAT IN EVERY SUCH CASE THE INSPECTOR SHALL ISSUE HIS CERTIFICATE, IN WHICH HE SHALL STATE THAT HIS INSPECTION HAS BEEN MADE UNDER PART TWO OF THIS ORDER.

Mode of Inspection.

Sec. 44. Any Inspector may, whenever he deems it necessary so to do, and one Inspector shall, at least once in every year, subject the boiler of every steamboat to a test by hydrostatic pressure, and shall satisfy himself by examination and experimental trials that such boiler is well made of good and suitable materials; the limit of such pressure shall be in the ratio of one hundred and fifty pounds to one hundred pounds allowable as a working pressure; for the purposes of such test the owner of the steamboat shall provide the necessary hand-pump and apparatus, and the same shall be worked by the crew of the steamboat; and no Inspector shall make or deliver to the owner or master of any steamboat, any certificate unless he has first subjected the boiler of such steamboat to such test by hydrostatic pressure.

Sec. 45. Before a boiler is subjected to a test by hydrostatic pressure, it shall be opened up for inspection, the man-hole doors and mud-plates removed, and the outside and inside of the boiler cleaned, the furnace grates removed and the furnace swept out clean, so that satisfactory and efficient inspection may be made.

When bulkheads are so placed as to prevent a close examination of the plates of the boiler, they shall be removed; and the owner or master of the steamboat shall see that the foregoing requirements are complied with before applying for inspection.

Sec. 46. In any case in which the test is not satisfactory, the defects shall be made good and the boiler retested satisfactorily before a certificate is granted.

Sec. 47. When the outside of the bottom of the boiler cannot be otherwise perfectly inspected, the boiler shall be lifted for inspection once at least in every four years.

Sec. 48. In subjecting boilers made of iron plates to the hydrostatic test aforesaid, the Inspector shall assume one hundred pounds to the square inch as the maximum pressure allowable as a working power for a new boiler 42 inches in diameter, made of the best refined iron, at least one-quarter of an inch thick, in the best manner and of the quality herein required, and shall rate the working pressure of all iron boilers, whether of greater or less diameter, according to their strength compared with this standard; and in all such cases the test applied shall exceed the working pressure allowed, in the ratio of one hundred and fifty pounds to one hundred, using the water in such tests at a temperature not exceeding sixty degrees Fahrenheit.

Sec. 49. In subjecting boilers made of steel to the hydrostatic test aforesaid, the Inspector shall assume one hundred and twenty-five pounds as the maximum pressure allowable as a working power for a new boiler 42 inches in diameter, made in the best manner of the best quality of steel plate, at least one-quarter of an inch thick, with all the rivet holes drilled in place, the plates being then taken apart and the burrs removed, the longitudinal seams in the shell being fitted with double butt steel straps cut across the grain of the plate, and each of at least five-eighths or over the thickness of the plates they cover, and all the seams being at least double riveted and having at least seventy per cent of the strength of the solid plate, and all the flat surfaces stayed in the best manner and all the seams double riveted,—and they shall rate the working pressure of all steel boilers so made, whether of greater or less diameter, according to their strength compared with this standard; and in all such cases the test applied shall exceed the working pressure allowed for such boilers in the ratio of one hundred and eighty-seven and a half pounds to one hundred and twenty-five pounds, using the water in such tests at a temperature not exceeding sixty degrees Fahrenheit.

Sec. 50. If the Inspector is of opinion that any boiler, whether made of iron or steel plates, by reason of its construction or material, will not safely allow so high a working pressure as that hereinbefore specified for each such description of boiler respectively, he may, for reasons to be stated specifically in his certificate, fix the working pressure of such boiler at less than two-thirds of the test pressure.

Sec. 51. The foregoing rules shall be observed in all cases, unless the proportion between such boilers and the cylinders, or some other cause renders it manifest that their application would be unjust, in which case the Inspector may depart from the said rules if it can be done with safety; but in no case shall the working pressure allowed exceed the proportion hereinbefore mentioned, as compared with the hydrostatic test.

Sec. 52. (a.) The external working pressure to be allowed on plane circular iron furnaces and flues subjected to such pressure, when the longitudinal joints are welded or made with a butt strap shall be determined by the following formula:—

(b.) The product of 90,000 multiplied by the square of the thickness of the plate in inches,—divided by the length of the flue or furnace in feet plus 1, multiplied by the diameter in inches,—shall be the allowable working pressure per square inch in pounds,—provided it does not exceed that found by the following formula:—

(c.) The product of 9,000 multiplied by the thickness of the plate in inches, divided by the diameter of the furnace or flue in inches, shall be the allowable working pressure per square inch in pounds,—

(d.) The length of the furnace to be used in the first formula being the distance between the rings, if the furnace is made with rings; and that one of the two formulæ which gives the lowest pressure being the one by which the Inspector shall be guided.

Sec. 53. (a.) On flat surfaces the allowable working pressure shall not exceed six thousand pounds to each effective square inch of sectional area of the stays supporting it; the pressure to be allowed on plates forming flat surfaces will be found by the following formula:—

$$\frac{C \times (T + 1)^2}{S - 6} = \text{Working pressure.}$$

T = Thickness of plate in sixteenths of an inch.

S = Surface supported in square inches.

C = Constant according to the following circumstances:—

C = 100 when the plates are not exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and the stays are fitted with nuts and washers, the latter being at least three times the diameter of the stay and two-thirds the thickness of the plate they cover.

C = 90 when the plates are not exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and the stays are fitted with nuts only.

C = 70 when the plates are not exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and the stays screwed into the plates, having the ends riveted over to form substantial heads.

C = 60 when the plates are exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and the steam in contact with the plates, and the stays fitted with nuts and washers, the latter being at least three times the diameter of the stay, and two-thirds the thickness of the plates they cover.

C = 54 when the plates are exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and steam in contact with the plates, and the stays fitted with nuts only.

(b.) If the diameter of riveted washers be at least two-thirds the pitch of the stays, and the thickness not less than the plates they cover, the constants may be increased to 150.

(c.) When doubling plates are fitted of the same thickness of the plates they cover, and not less in width than two-thirds the pitch of the stays, the constants may be increased to 160.

(d.) When doubling plates cover the whole of the flat surfaces. See sub-section (d) section 20 for formula.

C = 80 when the plates are exposed to the impact of heat or flame, with water in contact with the plates, and the stays screwed into the plates and fitted with nuts.

C = 60 when the plates are exposed to the impact of heat or flame, with water in contact with the plates, and the stays screwed into the plates, having the ends riveted over to form substantial heads.

C = 36 when the plates are exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and steam in contact with the plates, with the stays screwed into the plates, and having the ends riveted over to form substantial heads.

(e.) In cases where plates are stiffened by T or L irons, and a greater pressure is required for the plate than is allowed by the use of the above constants, the case should be submitted for the consideration of the Chairman.

(f.) When the riveted ends of the screw stays are much worn, or when the nuts are burned, the constants should be reduced, but the Inspector must act according to the circumstances that present themselves at the time of the inspection, and it is expected that in cases where the riveted ends of screw stays in the combustion boxes and furnaces are found in this state it will be often necessary to reduce the constant from 60 to 36.

(g.) When steel plates and stays are used, and under the conditions as described by part I of the rules, the increase to the constants for flat surfaces and stays apply, as defined by subsecs. (g), 1, 2 and 3, sec. 36.

(h.) Flat steel plates, which are in no way exposed to the action of the fire or hot gases and stayed with stays, having nuts with washers at least in diameter one-third pitch of stays, and half the thickness of plate, the working pressure to be allowed may be found by the following formula:—

$$48000 \times \frac{T^2}{P^2} = W. P.$$

T = Thickness of plate in inches.

P = Greatest pitch of stay bolts in inches.

(i.) For tube plates see sections 21 and 36, subsections (r) and (s).

Sec. 54. In order to satisfy himself as to the strength and condition of a boiler, the Inspector may, if he deems it necessary, order holes to be cut in it, and may also demand that such information shall be furnished him in respect to the interior construction of the boiler as will enable him to judge correctly of its strength.

Sec. 55. In no case shall a certificate be granted for a boiler when drift pins have been used in bringing the holes in the sheets together.

Sec. 56. Man-hole openings must be stiffened with compensating plates or rings of at least the same effective sectional area as the plates cut out and in no case shall such plates or rings be of less thickness than the plate to which they are attached, nor the attachment of less strength than the plate or ring. All openings in the shells of boilers should have their short axis placed longitudinally and if not so placed must have compensating plates or rings and attachments, equal to twice the effective sectional area of the plate cut out.

When cast iron frames are fastened around man-holes in steamboat boilers, a compensating ring in addition must be provided.

Mud-holes or hand-holes should not be placed in boiler shells of a greater short diameter than five inches, unless provided with reinforcing plates, and if on the cylindrical shell of a boiler, their short diameter should be in a line with the axis of the shell.

Sec. 57. When bars or angle irons are used for sustaining the crown sheet of the furnace of a boiler, three-fifths of the working pressure allowable upon the crown sheet shall be sustained by hanging stays from the shell of the boiler attached to the crown sheet.

Sec. 58. Donkey boilers on steamboats shall be provided with two safety-valves, which may be locked up.

Sec. 59. Boilers in which the longitudinal seams in the cylindrical shell are single riveted, in place of being double riveted, shall be subject to a reduction in the working pressure allowable for a boiler made in the best manner (as prescribed by sections 48 and 49 of these regulations), and the limit of pressure in boilers so made shall not exceed eighty pounds to the square inch in place of one hundred pounds or one hundred and twenty-five pounds, as mentioned in the said section.

Sec. 60. No boiler made and placed on board a steamboat shall be made of boiler plate, whether iron or steel, which has not been stamped with the maker's name of the maker thereof; and no certificate shall be granted with respect to any boiler made wholly or in part of plate not so marked; and before a certificate shall be granted with respect to any boiler, a declaration on oath by the maker of the boiler, stating the name of the maker of the plates, their quality, and the quality of all materials used in the construction thereof, shall be furnished to the Inspector; such oath may be taken before any justice of the peace in Canada, or before a notary public and certified under his official seal, if taken out of Canada: Provided always, that in any case where such declaration on oath by the maker of the boiler cannot be obtained owing to the death of the maker, or from any other cause deemed sufficient by the Inspector, the affidavit of two practical boiler-makers who have examined the boiler and reported upon the quality of the materials in it, and its workmanship and strength, shall if satisfactory to the Inspector, be deemed sufficient in lieu of such declaration by the maker of the boiler.

Sec. 61. During the construction of every boiler made in Canada, the maker of such boiler shall notify the Inspector of the district in which it is being made, that it is open to his inspection, and shall at all times during such construction, allow the Inspector access to such boiler.

Sec. 62. No boiler or pipe shall be approved which is made in whole or in part of bad material, or is unsafe in its form, or dangerous from defective workmanship, age, use, or any other cause.

Construction of boilers.

Sec. 63. (a.) When cylindrical boilers or the cylindrical parts of boilers composed of iron plates are made of the best material with all the rivet holes drilled in place and all the seams fitted with double butt straps, each of at least five-eighths the thickness of the plates they cover, and all the seams at least double riveted with rivets having an allowance of not more than 75 per cent over the single shear, and provided that the boilers have been open to inspection during the whole period of construction, then 4 may be used as the factor of safety. The tensile strength of the material is to be taken as equal to 48,000 lbs. per square inch with the grain, and 42,000 lbs. across the grain. When the above conditions are not complied with, the addition, in the following scale, must be added to the factor according to the circumstances of each case.

A-15—To be added when all the holes are fair and good in the longitudinal seams, but drilled out of place after bending.

B-3—To be added when all the holes are fair and good in the longitudinal seams, but drilled out of place before bending.

C-3—To be added when all the holes are fair and good in the longitudinal seams, but punched after bending instead of drilled.

D-5—To be added when all the holes are fair and good in the longitudinal seams, but punched before bending.

E-75—To be added when all the holes are not fair and good in the longitudinal seams.

F-1—To be added if the holes are all fair and good in the circumferential seams, but drilled out of place after bending.

G-15—To be added if the holes are fair and good in the circumferential seams, but drilled before bending.

H-15—To be added if the holes are fair and good in the circumferential seams, but punched after bending.

I-2—To be added if the holes are fair and good in the circumferential seams, but punched before bending.

J-2—To be added if the holes are not fair and good in the circumferential seams.

K-2—To be added if double butt straps are not fitted to the longitudinal seams, and the said seams are lap and double riveted.

L-1—To be added if double butt straps are not fitted to the longitudinal seams, and the said seams are lap and treble riveted.

M-3—To be added if only single butt straps are fitted to the longitudinal seams, and the said seams are double riveted.

N-15—To be added if only single butt straps are fitted to the longitudinal seams, and the said seams are treble riveted.

O1—To be added when any description of joint in the longitudinal seams is single riveted.

P-1—To be added if the circumferential seams are fitted with single butt straps and are double riveted.

Q-2—To be added if the circumferential seams are fitted with single butt straps and are single riveted.

R-1—To be added if the circumferential seams are fitted with double butt straps and are single riveted.

S-1—To be added if the circumferential seams are lap joints and are double riveted.

T-2—To be added if the circumferential seams are lap joints and are single riveted.

U-25—To be added when the circumferential seams are lap, and the strakes of plates are not entirely under or over.

V.3—To be added when the boiler is of such a length as to fire from both ends, or is of unusual length, such as flue boilers; and the circumferential seams are fitted as described opposite P., R. and S., but of course when the circumferential seams are as described opposite Q. and T., V.3 will become V.4.

W*.4—To be added if the seams are not properly crossed.

X*.4—To be added when the iron is in any way doubtful, and the Inspector is not satisfied that it is of the best quality.

Y†1.—To be added if the boiler is not open to inspection during the whole period of its construction.

(b.) The strength of the joints is found by the following method:—

$$\frac{(\text{Pitch} - \text{Diameter of rivet hole}) \times 100}{\text{Pitch}} = \text{Percentage of strength of plate at joint compared with the solid plate.} \dagger$$

$$\frac{(\text{Area of rivets} \times \text{No. of rows of rivets}) \times 100}{\text{Pitch} \times \text{thickness of plate}} = \text{Percentage of strength of rivets as compared with solid plate.} \dagger \dagger$$

(c.) Where marked * the allowance may be increased still further if the workmanship or material is very doubtful or unsatisfactory.

†† If the rivets are exposed to double shear multiply the percentage as found by 1.75.

† When surveying boilers that have not been open to inspection during construction the ease should be submitted to the Chairman as to the factors to be used.

P†1, Q†2, R†1, S†1, shall not apply to the end or circumferential seams, if such seams are sufficiently stayed by through bolts; nor to the seams between the square and round part of shell, in cylindrical boilers with square furnaces, when such seams are double riveted.

(d.) Then take iron as equal in tensile strength to 48,000 pounds per square inch and use the smallest of the two percentages as the strength of the joint, and adopt the factor of safety as found from the preceding scale:—

$$(\frac{48,000 \times \text{percentage of strength of joint} \times \text{twice the thickness of the plate in inches}}{\text{Inside diameter of boiler in inches} \times \text{factor of safety.}} = \text{Pressure to be allowed per square inch on the safety-valves.}$$

(e.) For steel plates of the best quality which fact must be made apparent to the Inspector who may, if he deems advisable, select any plates and have them tested, the tensile strength may be taken as equal to 60,000 pounds per square inch, using the same factor of safety.

(f.) Plates that are drilled in place must be taken apart and the burr taken off and the holes slightly countersunk from the outside.

(g.) Butt straps must be cut from plates and not from bars, and must be of as good quality as the shell plates, and for the longitudinal seams must be cut across the fibre.

(h.) The rivet holes may be punched or drilled when the plates are punched or drilled out of place, but when drilled in place must be taken apart and the burr taken off and slightly countersunk from the outside.

(i.) When single butt straps are used and the rivet holes in them punched they must be one-eighth thicker than the plates they cover.

(j.) The diameter of rivets must not be less than the thickness of the plates of which the shell is made, but it will be found when the plates are thin, or when lap joints or single butt straps are adopted, that the diameter of the rivets should be in excess of the thickness of the plates.

(k.) The distance of the rivet holes from the ends or edge of the plates shall not be less than the diameter of the rivet.

(l.) Dished ends that are not truly hemispherical must be stayed; if they are not theoretically equal in strength to the pressure needed they must be stayed as flat surfaces, but if they are theoretically equal in strength to the pressure needed the stays may have a strain of 10,000 pounds per effective square inch of sectional area.

Steam drums having a segmental or spherical head at each end, of a radius not greater than the diameter of drum to which attached, and not exposed to the impact of heat and flame, may be passed without stays, if theoretically equal in strength to the following formula:—

C = Tensile strength of plate in lbs.

T = Thickness of plate in inches.

R = Radius of head in inches.

F = 4 when heads are pressed into shape by machine and annealed, and 5 when heads are worked by hand into shape and annealed.

$$\frac{C \times T}{R \times F} = \text{Allowable working pressure}$$

(m.) Inspectors will remember that the strength of a sphere to resist internal pressure is double that of a cylinder of the same diameter and thickness.

Sec. 64. (a.) The neutral parts of boiler shells under steam domes must be sufficiently stiffened and stayed.

(b.) The sides of boilers having square furnaces and half round tops must be stayed from side to side of the shell, over the furnace, one or more rows of these stays to be placed well above the centre of the cylindrical part.

(c.) Screw stays are not to be used when supporting flat surfaces at any angle but a right angle to the surface supported, their diameter to be measured inside the thread. And when supporting crowns of furnaces, or combustion box crowns should be secured with nuts; and when not so secured, the constant C 36 is to be used for determining the allowable working measure on the plate supported; but if such plates are of less thickness than three eighths of an inch, the stays must be nutted.

(d.) The longitudinal seams in the cylindrical shell of boilers should be as far as possible from the bottom.

(e.) The inside diameter of the outside strake or course in the cylindrical shell of a boiler is to be taken as the measure of its diameter.

Sec. 65. (a.) In cylindrical superheaters, the strength of the joints and the factor of safety is found in a similar manner as for cylindrical boilers and steam receivers, but instead of using 48,000 pounds as the tensile strength of iron 30,000 pounds is adopted unless where the heat or flame impinges at or nearly at right angles to the plate, then 22,400 pounds is substituted.

(b.) In all cases the internal steam pipes should be so fitted that the steam in flowing to them will pass over all the plates exposed to the impact of heat or flame.

(c.) Superheaters or water-jackets should, as regards inspection, be deemed to be the most important part of the boilers and must be inspected inside and outside; those that cannot be entered (on account of their size) must have a sufficient number of doors through which a thorough investigation of the whole of the interior can be made.

(d.) Special attention should be paid to the inspection of superheaters, as with high pressure the plates may become dangerously weak and not give any sound to indicate their state when tested with the hammer; the plate should therefore be occasionally drilled. Drain pipes must be in all cases fitted to superheaters in which a collection of water in the bottom is possible.

(e.) Superheaters that can be shut off from the main boilers must be fitted with a Government lock-up safety-valve of sufficient size, but the least size passed shall not be less than 2 inches diameter.

Sec. 66. The areas of diagonal stays are found in the following way:—

Find the area of a direct stay needed to support the surface, multiply this area by the length of the diagonal stay and divide the product by the length of a line drawn at right angles to the surface supported to the end of the diagonal stay, the quotient will be the area of the diagonal stay required.

Sec. 67. (a.) When the tops of combustion boxes or other parts of a boiler are supported by solid rectangular girders, the following formula, which is used by the Imperial Board of Trade, will be useful for finding the working pressure to be allowed on the girders, assuming that they are not subjected to a greater temperature than the ordinary heat of steam, and in case of combustion chambers, that the ends are fitted to the edges of the tube plate and the back plate of the combustion box:

$$\frac{C \times d^2 \times T}{(W - P) D \times L} = \text{Working pressure.}$$

W = Width of combustion box in inches.

P = Pitch of supporting bolts in inches.

D = Distance between the girders from centre to centre in inches.

L = Length of girder in feet.

d = Depth of girder in inches.

T = Thickness of girder in inches.

N = Number of supporting bolts.

$C = \frac{N \times 1000}{N + 1}$ when the number of bolts is odd.

$C = \frac{(N + 1) 1000}{N + 2}$ when the number of bolts is even.

(b.) The working pressure for the supporting bolts and for the plate between them, shall be determined by the rule for ordinary stays.

Sec. 68. The flat ends of all boilers, as far as the steam space extends, and the ends of superheaters should be fitted with shield, or baffle plates, where exposed to the hot gases of the up-take, as all the plates subjected to the direct impact of heat or flame are liable to get injured unless covered with water.

“When a superheater is constructed with a tube subject to external pressure, the working pressure should be ascertained by the rules given for circular iron furnaces, but the constants should be reduced as thirty is to forty-seven.

“If steel is proposed to be used in superheaters, the particulars should be submitted to the Board of Steamboat Inspection or to the Chairman, if the Board is not sitting, for consideration, but in all cases it should be discouraged for this purpose; this applies to the unshielded up-takes of all boilers, including ordinary vertical donkey boilers.”

Sec. 69. Donkey boilers that are in any way attached to, or connected with the main boilers, or with the machinery used for propelling the ship, must be inspected and fitted the same way as the main boilers and have a water and steam gauge, and all other fittings complete, and as regards safety-valves, must comply with the same regulations as the main boilers, and no safety-valve shall be passed except as hereinafter provided in the rules relating to the inspection of safety-valves.

Sec. 70. (a.) No boiler or steam-chamber is to be so constructed, fitted or arranged as that the escape of steam from it through the safety-valve can be wholly or partially intercepted by the action of any other valve.

(b.) A stop valve must always be fitted between the boiler and the steam pipe, and when two or more boilers are connected with a steam receiver or superheater between each boiler and superheater or steam receiver. The object of this is obvious, viz., to avoid the failure of all the boilers through the failure of one. The uicks of stop valves should be as short as practicable.

(c.) Screwed steam connecting pipes of iron may be used on steamboats up to and not exceeding four inches diameter; and if such pipes are over two inches diameter, they must be connected with suitable flanges and bolts. The cocks, valves and pipes shall be substantially made with flanges, bolted and attached to the boilers to the satisfaction of the Inspector who inspected them; cast iron flanges on steam pipes or attached to boiler, shall not be used.

Sec. 71. (a.) Each boiler must be fitted with glass water gauge, at least two test cocks, and steam gauge, that is to say, each boiler must be fitted with all the fittings as complete as if they were only one boiler.

(b.) Boilers that fire at both ends and those of unusual width, must have water gauges and test cocks at each end or side, as the case may be. When a steamer has more than one boiler, and those boilers are fitted with stop valves, each boiler must be treated as a separate one and have all the requisite fittings.

Sec. 72. Inspectors are to be most careful not to give any official sanction to any new arrangement or construction of marine steam boilers, without first obtaining the permission of the Chairman in writing, nor are they allowed to give any written approval of any invention or arrangement unless by direction of the Board, and whenever they know that any invention or new arrangement is to be fitted to a vessel that is intended to have a passenger certificate, they should, as soon as possible, obtain plans and submit the same to the Chairman.

Sec. 73. When the longitudinal seams in cylindrical furnaces are not welded or made with a butt strap, as provided in section 52 of these regulations, the following constants will be substituted for 90,000:

- | | |
|---|---|
| (a.) Furnaces with butt joints and drilled rivet holes. | { 90,000 where the longitudinal seams are double riveted and fitted with single butt straps; 80,000 where the longitudinal seams are single riveted and fitted with single butt straps; 90,000 where the longitudinal seams are single riveted and fitted with double butt straps. |
| (b.) Furnaces with butt joints and punched rivet holes. | { 85,000 where the longitudinal seams are double riveted and fitted with single butt straps; 75,000 where the longitudinal seams are single riveted and fitted with single butt straps; 85,000 where the longitudinal seams are single riveted and fitted with double butt straps. |
| (c.) Furnaces with lap joints and drilled rivet holes. | { 80,000 where the longitudinal seams are double riveted and bevelled; 75,000 where the longitudinal seams are double riveted and not bevelled; 70,000 where the longitudinal seams are single riveted and bevelled; 65,000 where the longitudinal seams are single riveted and not bevelled. |
| (d.) Furnaces with lapped joints and punched rivet holes. | { 75,000 where the longitudinal seams are double riveted and bevelled; 70,000 where the longitudinal seams are double riveted and not bevelled; 65,000 where the longitudinal seams are single riveted and bevelled; 60,000 where the longitudinal seams are single riveted and not bevelled. |

Furnaces and Flues.

Sec. 74. (a.) The external working pressure to be allowed on plane circular steel furnaces and flues where subjected to such pressure, when the longitudinal joints are welded or made with a butt strap, shall be determined by the following formula:—

(b.) The product of 90,000 multiplied by the square of the thickness of the plate in inches, divided by the length of the flue, or furnace, in feet, plus 1, multiplied by the diameter in inches, will be the allowable working pressure per square inch in pounds, adding ten per cent to the result of the formula, provided it does not exceed that found by the following formula:—(c.)

$$\frac{90,000 \times T^2}{(L+1) \times D} = \text{Working pressure, where}$$

T = Thickness of plate in inches.

D = Diameter of flue outside in inches.

L = Length of flue or furnace in feet, or the length between the rings in feet, if it is strengthened by suitable rings or Adamson joints.

(c.) The product of 10,000 multiplied by the thickness of the plate in inches, divided by the diameter (outside) of the flue or furnace, in inches, will be the allowable working pressure per square inch in pounds.

(d.) When horizontal furnaces of ordinary diameter are constructed of a series of rings welded longitudinally, and the ends of each ring flanged and the rings riveted together, and so forming the furnace, the working pressure is found by the following formula, provided the length in inches between the centre of the flanges of the rings is not greater than $(120 T - 12)$ and the flanging performed at one heat by a suitable flanging machine, and also the conditions which follow which the formula are complied with.

T = Thickness of plate in inches.

L = Length between centre of flanges in inches.

D = Outside diameter of furnace in inches.

The radii of the flanges on the fire side should be about $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches. The depth of the flanges from the fire side should be three times the diameter of the rivet plus $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches, and the thickness of the flanges should be as near the thickness of the body of the plate as practicable. The distance from the edge of the rivet holes to the edge of the flange should not be less than the diameter of the rivet, and the diameter of the rivets at least $\frac{3}{8}$ inch greater than the thickness of the plate. The depth of the ring between the flanges should be not less than three times the diameter of the rivets, the fire edge of the ring should be at about the termination of the curve of the flange, and the thickness not less than half the thickness of the furnace plate. It is very desirable that these rings should be turned.

The holes in the flanges and rings should be drilled in place if practicable, but if not drilled in place they should be drilled smaller than the size required, and afterwards when in place rimmed out until the holes are quite fair, the holes should be slightly tapered and the heads of the rivets of moderate size.

After all the welding, flanging and heating is completed each ring should be efficiently annealed in one operation.

(e.) When the longitudinal seams in such furnaces are made with a single butt strap double riveted, or double butt straps single riveted, with all holes drilled in place, and the flanging of the ends is performed by hand, and then annealed instead of at one heat by a flanging machine, with all other conditions as to construction as described in subsec. (d) being complied with, then 8800 is to be substituted in place of 9900 in the formula, subsec. (d).

Corrugated Steel Furnaces and Flues.

Sec. 75. (a.) In steel flue furnaces when new, corrugated and machine made of the Fox corrugated and Morison suspension types, or the John Brown & Co, of the Purves ribbed and grooved type, or the Deighton and Fox type, if they are practically true circles, and the plates not less than $\frac{5}{16}$ inch thick, the working pressure is found by the following formula:—

$$\frac{C \times X}{D} = \text{Working pressure.}$$

C = 14,000.

T = Thickness in inches.

D = Outside diameter in inches, measured at the bottom of the corrugations when the furnace is of the corrugated or suspension type, or over the plain parts when it is of the ribbed and grooved description.

In Fox's corrugated furnaces the pitch of the corrugations should not exceed 6 inches, and in Morison's suspension furnace and the Deighton furnace the pitch should not exceed 8 inches. In these descriptions of furnaces the depth from top of corrugations outside to bottom of corrugations inside should not be less than 2 inches.

The ribs of ribbed and grooved furnaces should not be less than $1\frac{1}{8}$ inches above the plain parts, the depth of the grooves not more than $\frac{3}{8}$ inch, and the length between the centre of the ribs not over 9 inches. In each of these descriptions of furnaces the plain parts at the back ends should be so made that the length, measured from the waterside of the back tube plate to the centre of the back end corrugation or rib, does not exceed 9 inches. The plain parts at the front ends should also be so made that the length, measured from the centre of the first corrugation or rib, to the centre of the rivets by which the furnace is secured to the front end plate, does not exceed 9 inches. When the plain parts at the back ends are made conical, and the flange by which the attachment is made to the back tube plate is continuous, a length of $10\frac{1}{2}$ inches may be allowed between the waterside of the back tube plate and the centre of the first corrugation or rib. When this method of construction is adopted, the vertical section through the neck-piece should be kept as circular as is practicable. The set up at the bottom should not exceed 8 inches measured over the plates, and in no case should the vertical axis exceed the horizontal one by more than $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. The plates at the ends should not be unduly thinned in the flanging.

(6.) When the furnaces are riveted in two or more lengths the case should be submitted to the Chairman for consideration, as it may be necessary to make a reduction.

Corrugated Iron Furnaces.

Sec. 76. The working pressure for corrugated iron furnaces practically circular, and machine made, provided the plane parts at the ends do not exceed six inches in length and the plates are not less than $\frac{5}{16}$ inch thick, should not be greater than that found by the following formula:—

$$\frac{10,000 \times \text{thickness in inches}}{\text{Mean diameter in inches}} = \text{Working pressure per square inch.}$$

Duties of Inspectors.

Sec. 77. Inspectors are to fix the working pressure of boilers by a series of calculations of the strength of the various parts, and according to the workmanship and material.

Sec. 78. Before testing a boiler, the Inspector should examine it, take the necessary measurements and calculate what the working pressure should be, in accordance with these regulations. If the test is not satisfactory the defects must be made good and the boiler retested. This instruction applies to superheaters, steam chests and water-jackets as well as boilers.

Sec. 79. If the boiler is too hot for the Inspector to examine it efficiently with safety and convenience, he should decline to examine it, and absolutely refuse to grant a certificate until he can make an efficient examination.

Sec. 80. Inspectors should see all new boilers and boilers that have been taken out of a ship for a thorough repair, tested by a hydrostatic pressure up to at least one and one-half the working pressure that will be allowed previous to the boilers being placed in the vessel to test the workmanship, &c., but the working pressure is to be determined by the stay power, thickness of plates and strength of riveting, &c., and not by the hydrostatic test.

Sec. 81. The hydrostatic test should in no case exceed that provided by section 44 of these regulations, and it is never to be applied until the boiler has been opened up for examination and until the strength has been calculated from the necessary measurements taken from the boiler itself.

Sec. 82. When a boiler is partially inspected by one Inspector, and the inspection is completed and the certificate to be granted by another, if the Inspector who witnesses the test of the boiler by the hydrostatic pressure has an opportunity of examining it inside and outside after the test, such Inspector shall determine the working pressure to be allowed on the boiler in question, taking care to inform the owner or master, or maker or agent, and the Inspector who partially inspected it, what working pressure should in his opinion be allowed on it; and the Inspector who partially inspected the boiler, should inform the Inspector who completes the inspection, of all particulars of his inspection of the boiler.

Sec. 83. Cast iron must not be used for stays, and Inspectors should also discourage the use of cast iron for chocks and saddles for boilers. Particular attention should be paid to chocking and fastening boilers to the vessel.

Sec. 84. A pressure once allowed on the boiler of a passenger steamer is not, under any circumstances whatever, to be increased, unless the Inspector has previously written for and obtained the sanction of the Chairman. In cases where an Inspector is of opinion that an increased pressure may with safety be allowed, he should communicate with the Inspector who last inspected the boiler, and if on learning the reason why the existing pressure was formerly allowed, the Inspector is still of opinion that it may be increased, he should communicate all the facts of the case to the Chairman, but as above stated the pressure should not in any case be increased until the question has been decided by the Chairman.

Sec. 85. In fixing the maximum working pressure on steamboat boilers, Inspectors are to assume one hundred and twenty-five pounds to the square inch as the limit allowable for a new steel boiler forty-two inches in diameter, made in the best manner, of the best quality of steel plates, at least one-quarter of an inch thick, with all the rivet holes drilled in place, the plates being then taken apart and the burrs removed, the longitudinal seams in the shell being fitted with double butt steel straps cut across the grain of the plate and each of at least five-eighths the thickness of the plates they cover, and all the seams being at least double riveted and having at least seventy per cent of the strength of the solid plate, and all the flat surfaces stayed in the best manner and all the seams double riveted, and they shall rate the working pressure of all steel boilers so made, whether of greater or less diameter according to their strength compared with this standard, and in all such cases the test applied shall exceed the working pressure allowed for such boilers in the ratio of one hundred and fifty pounds to one hundred pounds, using the water in such tests at a temperature not exceeding sixty degrees Fahrenheit, and all percentages added to the factor of safety for inferior workmanship or material, are to be deducted from that pressure.

Sec. 86. In fixing the maximum working pressure on steamboat boilers, Inspectors are to assume one hundred pounds to the square inch as the limit allowable for a new boiler forty-two inches in diameter, made of the best refined iron, at least one quarter of an inch thick, in the best manner and of the quality herein required, and shall rate the working pressure of all iron boilers, whether of greater or less diameter, according to their strength compared with this standard, and in all such cases the test applied shall exceed the working pressure allowed, in the ratio of one hundred and fifty pounds to one hundred, using the water in such test at a temperature not exceeding sixty degrees Fahrenheit, and all percentages added to the factor of safety, for inferior workmanship or material, are to be deducted from that pressure.

Sec. 87. In the case of zig-zag riveting, the strength through the plate diagonally between the rivets is equal to that horizontally between the rivets, when diagonal pitch = $\frac{6}{10}$ horizontal pitch + $\frac{4}{10}$ diameter of rivet hole.

PART III.

Rules for Inspection of Water Tube Boilers.

MODE OF INSPECTION OF THE WATER TUBE PIPE OF BOILER KNOWN AS THE ROBERTS SAFETY WATER TUBE BOILER, OR OF SIMILAR TYPE OF BOILER.

Sec. 88. Any Inspector may, whenever he deems it necessary so to do, and one Inspector shall, at least once in every year, subject the water tube boiler of every steamboat to a test by hydrostatic pressure, in the ratio of two hundred pounds to the square inch, to one hundred pounds allowable as a working pressure, using the water in such test at a temperature not exceeding sixty degrees Fahrenheit, and shall satisfy himself by examination and experimental trials, under both steam and water tests, that such boiler is well made and of good and suitable materials. For the purposes of such tests, the owner of the steamboat shall provide the necessary hand-pump and apparatus, and fuel and other requisites, the same to be worked and operated by the crew of the vessel; and no Inspector of boilers and machinery shall make or deliver to the master or owner of any steamboat fitted with water tube boiler or boilers, any certificate of inspection unless he has first subjected the boiler or boilers of such steamboat to such tests by hydrostatic pressure, and running under steam, to test both the boilers and the working of the feed pumps while running, and by examination as herein prescribed, the period of test while running under steam to be not less than one hour, but may be extended to a longer time at the option of the Inspector.

Sec. 89. Before a water tube boiler is subjected to a test by hydrostatic pressure it shall be opened up for inspection, the outer covering shall be removed and the outside and inside of the boiler cleaned, the furnace grates removed and the furnace swept out clean, so that satisfactory and efficient inspection may be made. When bulkheads are so placed as to prevent a close examination of the plate and tubes of the boiler, they shall be removed, and the owner or master of the steamboat shall see that the foregoing requirements are complied with before applying for inspection.

Sec. 90. In any case in which the test is not satisfactory, the defects shall be made good and the boiler retested satisfactorily to the Inspector before a certificate is granted.

Sec. 91. Inspectors are to fix the working pressure of water tube boilers by calculations of the strength of the several parts hereafter specified, and by tests of the whole as provided herein.

Sec. 92. If a water tube boiler is too hot for an Inspector to examine it efficiently with safety and convenience, he should decline to do so, and absolutely refuse to grant a certificate until he can make a satisfactory examination.

Sec. 93. In order to satisfy himself as to strength and internal condition of a water tube boiler, the Inspector may, should he deem it necessary, order holes to be cut in it, any section or coils of pipes taken apart, and may also demand that such information by drawings and specifications of the several parts be furnished him of the construction, as will enable him to determine by calculations and tests and by examination their strength.

Sec. 94. During the construction of every water tube boiler intended for use on steamboats in Canada, the maker of such boiler shall notify the Inspector of the district in which it is intended to be used, or the nearest available Inspector, that it is open to his inspection, and shall at all times during such construction allow the Inspector free access to it.

Sec. 95. No part of a water tube boiler shall be made of boiler plate, whether iron or steel, which has not been stamped with the name or stamp of the maker thereof, and no certificate shall be granted with respect to any water tube boiler made partly of plate not so stamped, and before a certificate shall be granted with respect to any water tube boiler, a declaration on oath by the maker of the boiler, stating the name or stamp of the maker of the plates, their quality and the quality of all pipes and materials used in the construction of the boiler, and stating the quality of the workmanship, shall be furnished the Inspector; such oath may be taken before any justice of the peace in Canada, or before a notary public and certified under his official seal, if taken out of Canada: Provided that in any case such declaration on oath by the maker of the boiler cannot be obtained from any cause deemed sufficient by the Inspector, the affidavit of two practical water tube boiler makers who have examined the boiler and reported upon the quality of the materials in it, and its workmanship and strength, shall if satisfactory to the Inspector be deemed sufficient in lieu of such declaration by the maker of the boiler.

Sec. 96. To prevent questions arising after a water tube boiler is commenced, particulars of its construction by drawings or specifications should be furnished the Inspector by the maker or contractor for his approval, as to its general design and construction, the Inspector having received such drawings and specifications, and not disapproving of them, will be careful to see that they are followed in construction, or to make deductions to the working pressure if not followed; this regulation will also apply to boilers undergoing alterations.

Sec. 97. No water tube boiler or pipe in connection therewith shall be approved, which is made in whole or in part of bad or faulty material, or bad workmanship, or is unsafe in its form, or from age, or from use, or from any other cause.

Sec. 98. Inspectors should see all new water tube boilers, and water tube boilers that have been taken out of a ship for thorough repair, tested by hydraulic pressure up to at least twice the working pressure that will be allowed, previous to the boiler being placed in the vessel, to test the workmanship and materials; but the working pressure is not to be determined by the test alone, as the stay power, thickness of plate and tubes, and the strength and workmanship are all to be considered.

Sec. 99. The hydraulic test should not exceed twice the working pressure allowed, and it is never to be applied until the boiler has been opened up for examination, and the strength of the parts has been decided on, from the measurements and examination of those parts of the boiler.

Sec. 100. When a water tube boiler is partially inspected by one Inspector, and the inspection is completed and the certificate to be granted by another Inspector, if the Inspector who witnesses the tests of the boiler by hydrostatic pressure, and while running under steam, has an opportunity of examining the boiler inside and outside after the tests, such Inspector shall determine the working pressure to be allowed on the boiler, taking care to inform the owners or maker, or master or agents, and the Inspector who partially inspected it, what working pressure should in his opinion be allowed, and the Inspector who partially inspected the boiler should inform the Inspector who completes the inspection of all particulars of his inspection of the boiler.

Sec. 101. Cast iron must not be used for stays, pipes or elbows in water tube boilers; Inspectors should also discourage the use of cast iron for chocks and saddles for boilers; particular attention should be paid to chocking and fastening boilers to vessels to guard against shifting or breaking loose, and all pipes to be of the best quality of metal, lapwelded or solid drawn.

Sec. 102. A pressure once allowed on a water tube boiler is not under any circumstances to be increased, unless the Inspector has previously written for and obtained the sanction of the Chairman of the Board of Steamboat Inspection. In cases where an Inspector is of opinion that an increased working pressure may with safety be allowed, he should communicate with the Inspector who last inspected the boiler; and if on learning the reason why the existing pressure was formerly allowed, the Inspector is still of the opinion that it may be increased, he should communicate all the facts of the case to the Chairman; but, as above stated, the working pressure should not in any case be increased, until the question has been decided by the Chairman.

Sec. 103. In the event of any novelty in construction of a water tube boiler, or any departure from the practice of staying and strengthening as prescribed in these regulations and rules, the Inspector shall report full particulars to the Chairman before fixing the working pressure.

Sec. 104. An Inspector shall not declare a water tube boiler safe, unless he is fully informed as to its construction and material and workmanship; he should therefore be very careful when he proposes to give a certificate for a boiler that he is not called in to inspect until after it is completed and fitted in the ship.

Sec. 105. In the case of new water tube boilers the Inspector may allow a stress not exceeding 5,000 pounds per square inch of net section on solid iron screw stays supporting flat surfaces, but the stress should not exceed 4,000 pounds when the stays have been welded; where the head of drum is held by one stay in the centre, the area to be supported by it will be one quarter of the whole area of the head, measuring from inside of drum. Stays in water tube boilers may have an allowance of 6,000 pounds per square inch of sectional area, when under conditions similar to boilers to which rules in parts I. and II. apply.

Sec. 106. The pressure on plate forming flat surfaces is found by the following formulae:—

$$\frac{C \times (T + 1)^2}{S - 6} = \text{Working pressure per square inch.}$$

When the head of drum is supported by one stay in the centre the area of flat surface supported and the working pressure will be found by the formula:

$$\frac{C \times (T + 1)}{\left(\frac{d}{2} - 1\right)^2 - 6} = \text{Working pressure.}$$

d = Inside diameter of drum head in inches.

T = Thickness of plate in sixteenths of an inch.

S = Surface supported in square inches.

C = Constant as follows:

(a.) C = 80 when the plates are exposed to the impact of heat, flame or hot gases, and the water and steam (as in the Roberts Safety Water Pipe Boiler) in contact with the plates, and the stays screwed into the plates, fitted with nuts, or well riveted over with a good head.

(b.) When the riveted ends of the screw stays are much worn, or when the ends are burned, the constants should be reduced, but the Inspector must act according to the circumstances that present themselves at the time of the inspection, as when the ends of the screw stays are found in this condition, the constant may be reduced from 80 to 36. In doubtful cases, the Inspector should refer the case to the Chairman.

Sec. 107. The boiler shall be open to inspection during construction, the Inspector to satisfy himself that, in regard to all boilers constructed of this type made after the first day of February, 1891, the quality of the plate or material of which the drum is made is of the "best quality," and stamped with the name or stamp of the manufacturer thereof, and if of steel the tensile strength to be not less than 60,000 pounds, and the tests for plates (applicable when the drum is riveted longitudinally) and for stays to be similar to tests required in section 36 of the foregoing "Rules for inspection of boilers of steamboats."

(a.) The constant for calculating the working pressure to be allowed on the drum if of iron or steel plates when exposed to the impact of heat, flame or hot gases, and not protected by water or other satisfactory means, to be 30,000 pounds per square inch of sectional area, and when not so exposed the constants applicable are those as provided under parts 1 and 2 of the rules, due regard being had to percentage of seams if riveted, and to percentage of plate left by line of holes where the water tubes are attached, using a factor of not less than 5, with additions as provided in the foregoing "Rules for inspection of boilers of steamboats."

(b.) The distance between the edges of the tube holes in drum, must be not less than one half the diameter of such holes, and the least percentage of strength of plate either longitudinally, or diagonally, to be used for calculating the strength of drum at that section.

Sec. 108. The thickness of plate in drums of water tube boilers of less than ten inches diameter to be not less than three-eighths of an inch, and of ten inches diameter and up to fourteen inches diameter to be not less than half an inch thick, and the drum heads to be in no case less than half-inch thickness, and after being flanged, if of steel plate, to be annealed.

The drum heads of water tube boilers may be welded to the drum, instead of being riveted or bolted to the drum, when the drum and heads are made of iron, and of not over nine inches in diameter. If welded tube is used for drum, it must be made of iron.

Sec. 109. The safety-valves for the Roberts or similar type of boiler to be placed one on the steam pipe near the drum, and one on the drum; the number and dimensions of safety-valves will be the same as provided by "Rules relating to the inspection of safety-valves."

(a.) The aggregate safety-valve area required on each twin water tube boiler (connected by valves or cocks), over the same grate area, may be divided into or among four safety-valves, two being on each part of boiler.

PART IV.

RULES RELATING TO THE INSPECTION OF SAFETY-VALVES.

Sec. 110. (a.) After the following rules come into operation, every boiler made or placed on board a steamboat shall be fitted with two or more lock-up safety-valves of a practically equal area, and of a construction approved by the Board of Steamboat Inspection, or by the Chairman, if the Board is not then in session; the aggregate area of said lock-up safety-valves shall not be less than that given in the following tables opposite the boiler pressure intended, the safety-valves should be upon the boiler, or as near the boiler as practicable without pipes, cocks, valves, or other possible obstructions between the safety-valves and the boiler.

Every Inspector, when inspecting, visiting or examining the boiler or machinery of any steamboat, shall satisfy himself that the safety-valves attached thereto are of suitable dimensions, sufficient in number, well managed and in good working order, and only loaded so as to open at or below the certified working pressure; and he may, if he thinks proper, order and cause two or more of such safety-valves which together shall be of sufficient dimensions to discharge all the steam the boiler can generate, and of such construction as he approves, to be locked up and taken wholly away from the control of the engineer when the steam is up; but the engineer shall have access to the safety-valves when the steam is not up, and shall see that they are kept in working order, and the master of the steamboat shall see that the engineer has access to them for that purpose, and keeps them in proper working order.

The cocks, valves and pipes attached to the boiler shall be substantially made with flanges, bolted and attached to the boilers to the satisfaction of the Inspector who inspected them.

No valve, under any circumstances, shall at any time be so loaded or so managed in any way, as to subject a boiler to a greater pressure than that allowed by the Inspector at the then last inspection thereof.

Every safety-valve made or placed on board of a steamboat and attached to a boiler shall have a lift equal to at least one-fourth of its diameter; the openings for the passage of steam to and from the valves shall each have an area not less than the area of the valve, as shall also the waste steam pipe, and the valve box shall have a waste water pipe; if the lever of a lever safety valve is not bushed with brass the pin shall be of brass,—iron and iron working together shall not be allowed; every such safety-valve shall be fitted with a lifting gear so that it can be worked by hand, either from the engine room or the firehold, or by the master or person in charge on deck.

(b.) Safety-valves should not be passed of a diameter less than one inch and provided they are of approved construction, and the proportion of area of safety-valve to area of grate be complied with as given by the tables of safety-valve areas.

(c.) The grate area shall be ascertained by measuring the length of the grate from the inner edge of the dead plate to the front of the bridge, and the width from side to side of the furnace on top of the bars at the middle of their length.

(d.) The safety-valves should be tested (by the Inspector) on new boilers, or on other boilers if he wishes to test their efficiency, under full steam and full fires, for at least 15 minutes with the feed water shut off and stop valve closed: if the accumulation of pressure exceed 10 per cent of the loaded pressure, he should not issue a certificate without reporting to the Chairman full particulars of the test, and the strength pressure of the boiler, with sketch of safety-valve, and in no case is an Inspector to give a certificate for safety-valves unless he has examined them and is acquainted with the details of their construction.

Sec. 111. (a.) Inspectors are instructed that in all new boilers and whenever alterations can be easily made, the valve chest should be placed directly on the boiler, and the neck or part between the chest and the flange which bolts on to the boiler should be as short as possible.

(b.) In any case in which an Inspector is of opinion that it is positively dangerous to have a length of pipe between the boilers and the safety-valve chest, he shall at once insist on the requisite alterations being made before granting a certificate.

(d.) If lever safety-valves are used, the distance between the centre of the valve and the centre of the fulcrum, should not be less than the diameter of the valve.

(e.) Safety-valves must be placed in convenient and accessible places, that their adjustment and examination may be readily and efficiently made. The Inspector in his examination of the boilers and machinery is particularly to direct his attention to the safety-valves, and whenever he considers it necessary, he is to satisfy himself as to the pressure on the boiler by actual trial. The Inspector is to examine the safety-valves, weights, and springs at every inspection.

(f.) The valve seats should be secured so that they cannot lift with the valve.

(g.) The spindle should be attached to the valve, so that when it is lifted, the valve will also lift. It should also extend through the covers and be fitted with sockets and cross handles, allowing them to be lifted and turned around in their seats, and their efficiency tested at any time.

(h.) The size of the steel of which the spring is made in spring safety-valves is found by the following formula taken from the Imperial Board of Trade Rules:—

$$\sqrt[3]{\frac{S \times D}{c}} = d.$$

$c = 8,000$ for round steel.

$c = 11,000$ for square steel.

$S =$ the load on the springs in pounds.

$D =$ the diameter of the spring (from centre to centre of the wire in inches).

$d =$ diameter, or side of square, of the wire in inches.)

The spring should be protected from the steam and impurities issuing from the boiler, and in case of the spring breaking, means be provided to keep it in position on the valve.

(i.) A standard spring if made of the best square cast steel, contains .25 of a square inch, the inside diameter is two inches, and the outside diameter is three inches, it has thirteen complete coils with the ends and is 11½ inches long. The working load is assumed at 600 pounds, one-sixth of its breaking load when hardened to a temper, just sufficient to break it, at which load it should deflect just one inch.

(j.) To find the sectional area of any other spring the pressure or weight on the valve being given:—

600 : 700 : .25 : .29 = sectional area of spring at 700 pounds load. The other dimensions of the spring would be in like proportion, the number of coils thirteen being constant.

PART V.

Duties and Liabilities of Engineers.

Sec. 112. (a.) Engineers are required in all cases upon stopping of the engine to open the safety-valves, so as to keep the steam in the boiler below the limit allowed by the Inspector's certificate as prescribed by law, to open the doors or close the dampers, and when from accident or other cause, the water in the boiler has fallen below the point of safety, to put out the fires immediately.

(b.) Engineers shall keep the fire pump and hose and their connections in perfect condition ready for immediate use, and when found unfit for use from age or other cause, shall report their condition to the Inspector of Hulls by whom the steamer was last inspected.

(c.) Engineers when laying up a steamer in the fall, or when finally leaving her, are required to report to the owner and also to the Inspector of the nearest district any defects of, or injury to, the boilers and machinery by which the safety of the same may be endangered. They shall also report to the Inspector of the district at which the steamer next arrives, any accident happening to the boilers or machinery during the trip, and in case of omission to make such report, the license of the engineer so omitting shall be revoked.

(d.) The Chief Engineer of a steamer is held accountable by the Department of Marine for the proper care and management of the boilers and machinery under his charge. He is, therefore, in no case to absent himself from the vessel while on her regular trips, unless a competent substitute be provided to fill his place during his absence.

(e.) Engineers on first taking charge of a steamer, and at least once a year thereafter, shall satisfy themselves by close examination that the braces, stays and pins of the boiler are in good order, and sufficient for the strain to which they may be subjected; they shall also satisfy themselves that the safety-valves are in good working order and sufficient for the requirements of sections 65 and 110 of these regulations.

(f.) Engineers are to exhibit their certificates in the engine room along with a copy of these regulations.

Management of Boilers.

Sec. 113. (a.) Getting up steam.—Warm the boiler gradually. Steam should not be raised from cold water in less than four hours. If practicable light the fires over night. By getting up steam too quickly, the boiler will soon be destroyed.

(b.) Firing.—Fire regularly. Keep the sides up, and use the sliee gently and as seldom as possible.

(c.) Feed water.—Let the feed be regular and constant.

(d.) Glass gauge and try cocks.—Keep the glass free and try the gauge cocks every fifteen minutes.

(e.) Safety-valves.—Lift each safety-valve at least once a day, and always before getting up steam.

(f.) Low water.—Put out the fires by drawing them or throwing ashes on them. Never use water. Low water should never occur.

(g.) Blowing off the boiler.—Do not blow off by steam pressure; let the water run off if possible. See that the fires are all out and hot ashes removed.

(h.) Boiler Purgers.—Never use any compositions to keep down incrustation, or oil or other impurities to remove it, without the approval of the Chairman.

(i.) General Rules.—Keep the boiler clean inside and outside and free from leak. Never throw water in the furnace. Under high pressure, raise the safety-valve gently. Lower the fires, or, if necessary stop the engine (if in the master's opinion it can be done with safety to the vessel), when foaming, to find a water level.

PART VI.

REGULATIONS RELATING TO THE EXAMINATION OF ENGINEERS.

Fourth Class Engineers.

1. No person shall be entitled to a fourth class engineer's certificate unless he has the following qualifications, that is to say:

(a.) He shall be over twenty-one years of age.

(b.) He shall have served an apprenticeship of not less than thirty-six months in a steam engine shop, and been employed on the making and repairing of steam engines—or if he has not served such apprenticeship, he shall have been employed for not less than thirty-six months as a journeyman mechanic in some workshop, on the making and repairing of steam engines;—or

(c.) He shall have served at least thirty-six months in an engine room of a steamboat as engineer on the watch;—or

(d.) He shall have served not less than thirty-six months as oiler on the watch in the engine room of a steamer of not less than thirty nominal horse power;—or

(e.) He shall have served not less than forty-eight months as fireman on the watch in the firehold of a steamboat of not less than sixteen nominal horse power or having an engine of not less capacity than eighteen thousand cubic inches of cylinder volume;—

(f.) And in any of the above mentioned cases of service, twelve (12) months' service in a boiler shop on the making and repairing of steam boilers may be accepted in lieu of twelve months of the service named provided the candidate has had thirty-six months service as a practical boilermaker.

(g.) He shall be able to read, and write a legible hand.

(h.) He shall understand the construction and operation of the feed-water pump, water gauges and safety-valves; he shall know when a boiler is foaming, and how to stop the foaming, and also the dangers resulting from neglect to keep a boiler clean, and the usual methods of cleaning it.

Third Class Engineers.

2. No person shall be entitled to a third class engineer's certificate unless he has the following qualifications, that is to say:—

(a.) He shall be over twenty-one (21) years of age.

(b.) He shall have served an apprenticeship of at least thirty-six months in a steam engine shop employed in the making and repairing of steam engines,—or if he has not served such apprenticeship, he shall have been employed at least thirty-six months as a journeyman mechanic in some workshop, in the making and repairing of steam engines, and in either case shall also have served twelve months in the engine room of a steamboat, as engineer on the watch;—such steamboat having an engine of not less than four nominal horse power if a single cylinder engine, or nine nominal horse power if of the compound type.

(c.) He shall have served forty-eight months at least in the engine room of a steamboat as an engineer on the watch, having an engine of not less than four nominal horse power if a single cylinder engine, or nine nominal horse power if of the compound type, or thirty-six months as engineer on the watch on steamboats having an engine of not less than thirty nominal horse power.

(a.) In addition to the qualifications required for a second class engineer, he must have at least twelve months' service as senior engineer in the engine room, in a steamboat or in steamboats of one hundred nominal horse power or over, during which time he must have held a second class engineer's certificate of competency.

(g.) His knowledge of arithmetic must include the extraction of the square and cube root, and the mensuration of superficies and solids.

Interpretation.

The term "apprenticeship" refers to one who has been employed continuously for the period mentioned, gaining the instructions as required under a master, and if such service has not been continuous in one employ, the applicant must have at least forty-eight months service, on the making or repairing of steam engines.

The term "journeyman mechanic" refers to a person who has been employed as competent to perform the duties of shaping and fitting the parts of steam engines and erecting them.

The term "engineer on the watch" means the person in charge of the propelling engines and boilers, and responsible for the bells or signals, while on duty under way.

Applications for examination are to be made to the Board of Steamboat Inspection, or to the Inspector of the division where the candidate resides, the application to be made on forms furnished for that purpose by the Inspector, and to be accompanied with proofs of service, and testimonials as to sobriety, experience and ability, and to character, and to general good conduct for at least the twelve months immediately preceding the date of application to be examined. If the service has been on shore the testimonials must be signed by an employer; if at sea by the master and chief engineer; if not so signed satisfactory reasons must be given the examiner, who will not accept proofs of service or testimonials which are not entirely satisfactory. In the absence of the necessary verification the candidate cannot be examined.

The examiner should be particularly careful to ascertain that there are no gaps in the candidate's service which are not properly accounted for, before he is allowed up for examination.

Engineers who from any cause have had their certificates cancelled will be re-examined before they are again allowed to hold a certificate of the same grade. Upon their passing the examination a new certificate will be issued to them. The Minister of Marine may, however, in special cases, upon report of the Board of Steamboat Inspection, if the circumstances warrant it, dispense with the re-examination.

QUALIFICATION REQUIRED FOR SECOND OR FIRST CLASS ENGINEERS' CERTIFICATES VALID IN THE UNITED KINGDOM.

Candidates for second or first class Canadian (engineers') certificates valid in the United Kingdom will be required to pass examinations equal to the examinations in the United Kingdom.

The service required, proof of which the examination papers of the applicant must exhibit, is as follows:—

Second Class Engineer.

Sec 5. A candidate for a second class engineer's certificate must be 21 years of age.

(a.) He must have served as an apprentice engineer for four years at least, and prove that during the period of his apprenticeship he has been employed on the making or repairing of steam engines, boilers, &c. Three years of the apprentice time must have been passed in the fitting or erecting shops, or in both. In calculating the four years of artisan service which are to constitute the required apprenticeship, which should not begin at an earlier age than 15, time spent at a technical school (recognized by the Board of Steamboat Inspection as suitable) where there is an engineering laboratory, may be taken into account and accepted as equivalent to artisan service at the ratio of three years in the technical school to two in artisan service, provided that the applicant was over 15 years of age, and can produce the principal's certificate for regular attendance and satisfactory progress, and provided also that in such case the other portion of the time was spent in the fitting or erecting shops of an engineer, as indicated above.

Journeyman's time will be considered as equivalent to apprenticeship.

Every applicant must produce testimonials of ability as an engineer workman to the satisfaction of the Chairman of the Board of Steamboat Inspection.

If the candidate has not served for four years as an apprentice engineer, or as a journeyman, he will be required to have served, in lieu thereof, four years at sea as engineer on regular watch on the main engines or boilers of a foreign-going steamer of not less than 66 nominal horse power, or six years in a home trade steamer of not less than 66 nominal horse power.

(b.) In addition to the apprenticeship as above described, or the alternative sea service, the applicant must have served one year at sea as engineer on regular watch on the main engines or boilers of a foreign-going steamer of not less than 66 nominal horse power; or eighteen months in a home trade steamer of not less than 66 nominal horse power.

(c.) He must be able to give a satisfactory description of boilers, and the methods of staying them, together with the use and management of the different valves, cocks, pipes and connections.

(d.) He must understand how to correct defects from accident, decay, &c., and the means of repairing such defects.

*No period of service in a drawing office of over six months can be allowed to count for workshop service.

(e.) He must understand the use of the water gauge, pressure gauge, barometer, thermometer, and salinometer, and the principles on which they are constructed.

(f.) He must state the causes, effects, and usual remedies for incrustation and corrosion.

(g.) He must be able to explain the method of testing and altering the setting of the slide valves, and method of testing the fairness of shafts and adjusting them.

(h.) He must be able to calculate the suitable working pressure for a steam boiler of given dimensions, and the stress per square inch on crank and tunnel shafts when the necessary data are furnished.

(i.) He must understand the construction of steering engines, evaporators, feed filters, and feed heaters.

(j.) He must understand the construction of centrifugal, bucket, and plunger pumps, and the principle on which they act.

(k.) He must be able to state how a temporary or permanent repair could be effected in case of derangement of a part of the machinery, or total break down.

(l.) He must write a legible hand, and have a good knowledge of arithmetic up to and including vulgar and decimal fractions and square and cube root. He must also understand the application of these rules to questions about safety valves, coal consumption, consumption of stores, capacities of tanks, bunkers, &c.

(m.) He must be able to pass a creditable examination as to the various constructions of paddle and screw engines in general use; as to the details of the different working parts, external and internal, and the use of each part.

(n.) He must possess a creditable knowledge of the prominent facts relating to combustion, heat and steam.

First Class Engineer.

Sec. 6. A candidate for a first class engineer's certificate must be not less than 22 years of age.

In addition to the qualification required for a second class engineer,

(a.) He must:—

(1.) Have served at sea for 12 months, with a second class certificate of competency, or service, as senior engineer in charge of a watch on the main engines or boilers of a foreign-going steamship of not less than 99 nominal horse power; or

(2.) Have served at sea for 18 months, with a second-class certificate of competency or service, as first engineer of a home trade steamer of not less than 99 nominal horse power; or 2 years with a second-class certificate of competency or service as a second engineer of a home trade steamer of not less than 99 nominal horse power; or

(3.) Have served 2½ years with a second-class certificate of competency or service as third engineer of a home trade steamer of not less than 99 nominal horse power, if, during the whole of that period he has been the senior engineer in charge of a watch on the main engines and boilers; or

(4.) possess, or be entitled to, a first-class certificate of service.

(b.) He will be required to make an intelligent hand sketch, or a working drawing of some one or more of the principal parts of a steam-engine, and to mark in, without a copy, all the necessary dimensions in figures, so that sketch or drawing could be worked from. See Appendix D.

(c.) He must also be able to take off and calculate indicator diagrams.

(d.) He must be able to calculate safety-valve pressures, and the strength of the boiler shell, stays and riveting.

(e.) He must be able to state the general proportions borne by the principal parts of the machinery to each other, and to calculate the direct stress, the torsional stress, and the bending stress in round bars, and the direct stress and the bending stress in rectangular bars with given loads.

(f.) He must be able to explain the method of testing and altering the setting of the slide valves, and to sketch about what difference any alteration in the slide valve will make in the indicator diagram, and also the method of testing the fairness of shafts, and of adjusting them.

(g.) He must be conversant with surface condensation superheating and the working of steam expansively.

(h.) His knowledge of arithmetic must include the mensuration of superficies and solids and the extraction of the square and cube roots, and the application of these rules to questions relating to the power, duty and economy of engines and boilers, and to the stresses in rods, shafts and levers of the engine.

(i.) He must understand the construction of, and be able to maintain in working condition the auxiliary machinery which is placed under his charge, viz.: refrigerating machinery, electric light engines, and dynamos, electric motors fitted to ships' boats, hydraulic machinery, and the various descriptions of steering engines, &c.

Sec. 7. When the workshop service has been performed in a place where steam engine are not made or repaired, and the class of work done is similar to that required in engine making, the service may be accepted with an additional year in the engine room; that is, four years' workshop service and two years in the engine room (of which one year must have been at sea), or one year at sea in the engine room and one year at engine fitting in a suitable marine engine workshop. The approval of the Chairman of the Board of Steamboat Inspection must be obtained in every such case before the candidate is examined.

Sec. 8. When the workshop service has been performed in a place where engines are made, and the department in which the applicant has been principally engaged is not "fitting" or "erecting," the case must be referred to the Chairman of the Board of Steamboat Inspection with a report upon the service performed. If the service be such as is useful training for an Engineer, the Chairman may accept the service, but in every such case the applicant must prove additional engine room or marine engine workshop service as required above.

Sec. 9. In the case of candidates for First Class Certificates qualifying service means service on regular watch as Senior Engineer in charge of the main engines or boilers. During the whole of the period claimed, candidates must have been in possession of Second Class Certificates.

In the case of candidates for Second Class Certificates, qualifying service means service as Engineer on regular watch on the main engines or boilers. In no case will time spent in clerical work be allowed to count.

Sec. 10. In all cases the candidates' names must have been duly entered on the ship's Articles as Engineers in their proper ratings.

Sec. 11. Being on regular watch means being on watch for at least eight hours a day.

Sec. 12. Only such service as gives the experience required to make a man thoroughly competent as a sea-going Engineer is accepted as qualifying service. Even for a Second Class Certificate the candidate must prove to the satisfaction of the Examiner that he is qualified by experience and knowledge to act as Chief Engineer in an under-powered steamer of 99 nominal horse-power on a voyage, say, Canada to England, taking full responsibility for engines and boiler.

Sec. 13. The sea-service required by these Regulations is, unless otherwise stated, service performed in foreign-going ships.

Sec. 14. Service in the home or coasting trade is regarded as being equivalent to two-thirds of the same period of time served in the foreign trade.

Sec. 15. Service as watchkeeper on a lake or river steamer of not less than 66 nominal horse-power may be accepted under the following conditions:—

- (1.) the service will only count half as much as sea service; i.e., every two months of lake or river service is only equivalent to one month's sea service;
- (2.) candidates for second class certificates must prove, in addition to the lake or river service, at least three months' qualifying service at sea in a steamship of not less than 66 nominal horse-power;
- (3.) candidates for first class certificates must prove, in addition to lake or river service in vessels of 99 nominal horse-power, at least six months' qualifying service at sea, with a Second Class Engineer's Certificate, in vessels of not less than 99 nominal horse-power.

Sec. 16. Service performed on board auxiliary screw whalers and other vessels with auxiliary steam power of not less than 66 nominal horse-power, in the capacity of Engineer may be allowed to count towards qualifying candidates for examination for Second Class Engineers' Certificates of Competency to the extent of one-half the time the vessel is actually at sea. If the candidate is able to prove a larger amount of time under steam, he will be allowed to count the whole of such extended time.

Sec. 17. Service in sea-going steam dredgers, trawlers, or tug-boats may be accepted under the following conditions:—Two months of such service is only equivalent to one month's qualifying service. Candidates for second class certificates may perform all their sea service in sea-going steam dredgers, trawlers, or tug-boats, but they must have been on regular watch on the main engines or boilers, and the vessels must not be less than 66 nominal horse-power. Candidates for first class certificates must have served in vessels of at least 99 nominal horse-power, and have been in charge of a watch on the main engines or boilers. They must, in addition, have served in a qualifying capacity for at least six months in a foreign-going cargo or passenger steamship, or nine months in a home trade cargo or passenger steamship.

Sec. 18. All candidates will be required to produce, in addition to the official discharge certificates, testimonials as to their workshop service and as to their service at sea. The testimonials as to workshop service must be signed by the employer, and must testify to the candidate's conduct and ability, and state what kind of work he was engaged on (e.g., fitting, erecting, etc.), and for how long.

Sec. 19. Testimonials as to service at sea must testify to the applicant's sobriety, experience, ability, and general good conduct for at least the last twelve months' service at sea preceding the date of application to be examined. They must be signed by the master and chief engineer (or in the case of testimonials to chief engineers, by the master and superintending engineer) and must clearly state whether the applicant was on regular watch, and in regular charge of a watch on the main engines or boilers. It is desirable that testimonials of candidates should be endorsed by the superintending engineer. No time spent in clerical work will be allowed to count.

Sec. 20. In cases where a testimonial from the chief engineer, or from the master, is for any sufficient reason not obtainable, one may be submitted from the superintending engineer in place of that of the chief engineer, and one from the managing owner or secretary or chairman of a large company in place of that of the master; but in every such instance the testimonial must declare that the facts stated are in accordance with the reports made by the chief engineer or the master, as the case may be, or else that the facts are within the writer's personal knowledge.

Sec. 21. When a candidate is observed to be hard of hearing, or is labouring under any other obvious physical defect, the signatories of his testimonials are required to mention that fact specifically, and to state whether it in any way interfered with the efficiency of the candidate as an engineer on watch. When these modified testimonials are such as to completely satisfy the examiner that the defect is not such as to interfere with the efficient discharge of the applicant's duties as engineer, the examination is proceeded with; otherwise the case is referred to the Chairman of the Board of Steamboat Inspection. Candidates afflicted with nervous impediment in speech may write their answers to vide voce questions.

Sec. 22. The testimonials of service of foreign engineers and of British engineers serving in foreign vessels, which cannot be verified by the Registrar-General of Seamen, must be confirmed either by the Consul of the country to which the ship in which the candidate served belonged, or by some other recognized official authority of that country; or by the testimony of some credible person on the spot having personal knowledge of the facts required to be established. The production, however, of such proofs will not of necessity be deemed sufficient. Each case must be decided on its own merits; and if the sufficiency of the proofs given appears to be at all doubtful, the point must be referred to the Chairman.

Sec. 23. Service which cannot be verified by proper entries in the articles of agreement of the ships in which the candidates have served cannot be counted.

Sec. 24. Foreign engineers must prove to the satisfaction of the examiners that they can speak and write the English language sufficiently well to perform the duties required of them on board a British vessel. In every case, before failing a candidate for insufficient knowledge of the English language the examiner should refer the matter to the Chairman. Examinees will be guided in the elementary and arithmetical questions by the regulations issued; as stated therein, complying with British Board of Trade requirements as per copies supplied.

APPENDIX D.

EXAMINATION IN ROUGH WORKING DRAWING FOR A FIRST-CLASS ENGINEER'S CERTIFICATE OF COMPETENCY (Form Exn. 17).

1. The regulations of the Board of Trade in regard to the qualifications of a candidate for a first-class engineer's certificate of competency specify that.—

“He must be able to make working rough drawings of the different parts of the engines and boilers.

“He must be able to state the general proportions borne by the principal parts of the machinery to each other.”

2. In accordance with these clauses, a candidate for a first-class certificate is required to make a rough working drawing of the parts specified as on specimen Form Exn. 17a. An engineer who has been some years in charge of marine engines and boilers ought to have familiarly in his mind the general construction of at least one set of engines and boilers, say that set he was last with. Fine drawing is not expected, and in the proportions of the parts a wide margin will be allowed, absurd dimensions will be failure in practical knowledge.

3. The drawing must, however, be practically a working drawing, giving a sufficient number of views to show the parts fully—sections, plans, or elevations just as the candidate would require to be supplied to him if he had to make the parts to the design of another person.

4. A clear and sketch showing the construction completely, and fully dimensioned, will be accepted if the candidate prefers this alternative.

5. A portion only of the parts specified may be accepted in place of the whole, if that portion is sufficient to show that the candidate has a good practical idea of the construction of the parts, and a fair notion of their general proportions or dimensions.

6. Candidates are hereby cautioned not to put on paper what they have not fully considered, and deliberately intend to be understood, as their statement of what they know about the construction of any part required.

7. The statements given in by a candidate may be in themselves, apparently, of little importance, but, as sample material from which the state of the candidate's knowledge of engines and boilers is to be inferred, every detail which is glaringly inconsistent with a sound knowledge of the use of the part, or in which an essential consideration has evidently been overlooked, is an important element in the description which the candidate is giving of his own qualifications.

8. The candidate is advised not to begin more than he can clearly finish in the time allowed. An important object in this part of the examination is to ascertain whether the candidate can be trusted to mark all necessary dimensions upon a sketch or a drawing. The test of this is, practically, the making of the part from the sketch without having to supply additional dimensions, and without measuring the drawing. To prove this ability the candidate must fully dimension the part shown in his sketch or drawing, notwithstanding that the parts may be correctly drawn to scale. A drawing is fully dimensioned when no part of it is left to the option of the party who is to work to the drawing.

9. To prevent misunderstanding, however, when the candidate has been led into showing more of the details than he has time fully to finish, he should name, in the statement on the other side, the particular parts which he has fully dimensioned.

10. All dimensions should have lines and darts, to indicate distinctly the points between which the dimensions are given.

11. Beware of writing cross dimensions upon centre lines, or upon longitudinal dimension lines. This is not an order but a recommendation.

12. The candidate is not expected to design anything; he has merely to sketch or draw a something with which he is expected to be already familiar. At the same time he should call attention to any defect in the design of the article or apparatus. Omission to do so will imply want of practical knowledge.

13. Pencil in nothing after half-past 3; all the dimensions, the figures, and the darts must be inked in; employ the remaining time in examining the drawing and in inking in any figures which may have been before overlooked, and in checking the dimensions.

14. Make sure that you will have sufficient room on the drawing sheet to show all the necessary views. You can have another sheet of drawing paper if necessary. All the paper used must be forwarded with the drawing.

Interpretation.

"Coasting or home trade" refers to service in steamships plying between any place or places in Canada, and any other place or places in Canada, not being a port or place on the inland waters; also to service between a place or places in Canada and another place or places in North America which does not necessarily pass south of the parallel of 30° north latitude. Service in the coasting trade is regarded as being equivalent to two-thirds of the same period of time served in the foreign trade.

"Sea service" or "foreign trade" refers to service in steamships engaged in the foreign sea trade, and plying between some place or places in Canada and some place or places outside of Canada; and outside of the limit of the coasting trade as hereinbefore defined.

PART VII.

Inspection of Hulls and Equipment of Steamboats.

Sec. 1. Inspectors of Hulls, before granting a certificate, must be satisfied that the following particulars have been complied with, in accordance with the requirements of the Act relating to steamboat inspection:—

(a.) That the hull of the vessel is sufficient for the service intended, and in good condition, and in addition having ample shelter and accommodation; with a sufficient number of sanitary closets for the use of passengers and crew.

(b.) That the boats, life-preservers, buoys, lights, signals and compasses are in good condition, and the certificates of the master and mate, or mates, are such as are required by the Act governing same.

(c.) The time (if less than 12 months) for which the said hull will be deemed sufficient.

(d.) The limits (if any) beyond which, as regards the hull and equipments, the vessel is, in the Inspector's judgment, not fit to ply.

(e.) The number of passengers, besides the crew, the vessel is allowed to carry, distinguishing, if necessary, between the respective numbers to be carried on the main deck and upper deck.

Sec. 2. (a.) Inspectors shall make their inspections when the owner, or master, and engineer of the vessel are present, if possible. Repairs can then be required, and defects can be pointed out to the proper persons without incurring delay. If these persons are not present, the Inspectors will make their inspection without them.

(b.) In order to prevent any mistakes as to the nature and extent of repairs required by the Inspectors, whenever they can not give a certificate until the repairs are effected or alterations made, a written statement of the defects to be remedied or alterations required, shall in all cases, be handed to the owner or master of the vessel, whether such statement is applied for by him or not, a copy of which should be always taken and transferred to the office press letter book.

(c.) If any difference of opinion arises between the Inspector and the owner or master, the facts should at once be submitted to the Chairman of the Board of Steamboat Inspection for consideration, and for reference to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, when necessary.

Sec. 3. If a vessel usually plying in one district, is taken to another district to be inspected, the Inspector in the latter district shall not give a certificate without first communicating with the Inspector for the former district; nor, if there is any difference of opinion, without referring the question to the Chairman aforesaid for decision.

Sec. 4. It is the duty of the Inspector of Hulls to satisfy himself personally upon every detail of the inspection of a vessel's hull and equipment and not to trust to any certificate, or other document given by any person not responsible to his Department, who will hold him responsible to the fullest extent for the performance of the duty entrusted to him, and will support him in any reasonable step he may think necessary, in order to the fullest performance of his duty.

Sec. 5. In case the Inspector has reason to believe that the hull or equipment is not fit for so long a time as twelve months, he is to grant his certificate for such shorter period as he may deem proper, informing the owners of his reasons for so doing.

Sec. 6. It is most desirable that an Inspector should complete the inspection of a vessel in every detail when he has commenced it; and, if possible, arrangements should always be made with the owners to secure this. Delays and inconveniences may be prevented, if notice is given by owners when the vessel is ready for inspection, and her equipment in place on board.

Sec. 7. Every person who knowingly and wilfully makes or assists in making, or procures to be made, a false or fraudulent certificate with respect to any steamboat, or who forges or assists in forging, or procures to be forged, fraudulently alters or assists in fraudulently altering any certificate required by the Steamboat Inspection Act, or any words or figures in any such certificate or any signatures thereto, is guilty of a misdemeanour.

Sec. 8. A certificate for twelve months shall not be granted, whenever the Inspector has any doubts whatever, as to the efficiency of any part of the vessel or equipment for such period.

Sec. 9. Inspectors shall determine whether hulls of steamers are in good condition and fit for the service for which they are intended; and shall examine the hulls of passenger steamers outside and inside, once a year if possible, or oftener, as deemed advisable by the Inspector with due consideration of the owner, and owners at all times so as to avoid repeated expenses should notify Inspectors when their vessels are being docked, or undergoing any repair.

Sec. 10. New steamboats shall be inspected before painting or completion, but any such inspection is not to interfere with the complete inspection of hull and equipment, after completion, the object being to form an opinion of the workmanship, material and construction.

Sec. 11. When a steamboat which has been inspected for a passenger certificate, is not in every respect in good condition, although the defects may not be sufficient to warrant the withholding the certificate, and although the vessel may be practically fit for the service intended, the Inspector should, when he grants the certificate, forward to the Chairman aforesaid a report showing the nature of the defects in question.

Sec. 12. For examining the internal parts of a steamboat, the Inspector shall, if he considers it necessary, have parts of the ceiling removed, in order that he may ascertain the condition of the hull, frames, floors, &c., particularly in the engine room and boiler space, and also in the coal bunkers, they being empty.

Sec. 13. The date of the last inspection shall be entered in an office inspection book with particulars of the condition of the hull at that time, with approximate sketches of the midship section, showing the form, build, and dimensions of the vessel, and parts, sufficiently to judge of her shape and strength. Any question or doubt as to the strength of the vessel for the route on which she is placed, should be referred to the Chairman aforesaid.

Sec. 14. The height of the coamings around all openings in main deck, and the means provided for securely protecting or fastening down all skylights, bunker openings, &c., are important items to be noticed by the Inspector in steamboats subject to heavy seas. All gangways and openings, on, or below weather deck, should be fitted with covers in such a manner that they can be quickly and efficiently secured. Hatch covers should be provided with means for effectually securing them down. Grating and hatch covers must be kept and secured in a suitable place, at all times accessible, and near to the openings for which they are intended.

Sec. 15. All boats should be hung on the davits and kept ready for service at any moment. Inspectors should see that in all boats the full complement of oars is provided, that each boat has two plugs to each plug hole, attached with lanyards or chains, and one set and a half of thole pins or crutches attached to the boat by sound lanyards, a bailer, a rudder and tiller or yoke and yoke lines; a painter of sufficient length and a boat-hook. The rudder and bailer shall be attached to the boats by sufficient long lanyards and ready for use; means for speedily detaching the boats from the lower blocks of the davit tackles should be insisted upon. An ordinary fixed hook in the lower block shipped into a fixed eye in the boat should not be allowed.

Sec. 16. Inspectors should see that the davits are strong enough, that they are so spaced that the boat can be swung out without unnecessary labour; that the boat chocks can be expeditiously removed, and that the boats will not foul the ship's sides when lowering, when the ship has no list. The whole of the tackling, including the davits, falls, blocks, eye-holts and rings, &c., shall be of sufficient strength to lower the boat with its full equipment on board. The davit tackle falls must be long enough to lower the boat into the water, when the vessel is light. Life lines shall be fitted to the davits long enough to reach the water when the vessel is light, and allowance made for the extreme roll of the vessel.

Sec. 17. Inspectors will refuse a certificate in cases in which these instructions are not carried out, but it is to be left to the owners of steamboats to furnish such methods as they please for lowering boats so long as the intention of the Act is complied with. Any unusual or doubtful method of lowering boats must be submitted to the Board of Steamboat Inspection for its consideration and approval before it is passed. All boats should be lowered into the water at every inspection.

Sec. 18. Life-buoys with lines attached should be secured by a toggle or becket, or any other similar method, so that they may be quickly released. They must not be lashed or seized to the rail or any other part of the vessel, but must be kept so as to be ready for use at a moment's notice in case of emergency. Life-buoys and jackets shall be carefully examined when inspecting the vessel to see that the materials of which they are composed have not become sodden and that the lines attached to them are of sufficient length, serviceable and in good order.

Masts and Sails and Gangboards.

Sec. 19. "The Steamboat Inspection Act" empowers the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to require steamships above sixty tons registered tonnage, carrying passengers on the sea-coasts of the Dominion or on any, or on all the waters of the Dominion, with certain exceptions, to be provided with a mast or masts and sail or sails, suitable for such steamboat; and to prescribe the dimensions of such mast or masts, and sail or sails respectively.

Sec. 20. Inspectors of hulls when inspecting passenger steamboats employed on the sea-coast, or on the great lakes of the Dominion, are to see that they are fitted with sufficient sail power to enable them to steer in the event of their machinery becoming disabled. All such sails must be examined by the Inspector, who must be assured of their efficiency, as also with that of the standing and running gear at every inspection, and in any case of doubt to apply to the Chairman.

Sec. 21. Inspectors shall see that suitable and safe gangboards are provided with means for securing them safely at both ends.

Sec. 22. In the first inspection of a steamboat employed on the seacoast or on the great lakes of the Dominion, whether built of iron or wood, the Inspector shall require the compasses to be properly adjusted, or verified by a competent person, selected by the owner, whereupon such competent person shall grant a certificate to the owner to the effect that the compasses of the ship are properly adjusted, and a table of errors shall be furnished and handed by the owners to the Inspector before he gives the certificate of inspection.

Sec. 23. Inspectors of hulls shall see that the deck pumps, whether for fire or bilge purposes, are properly placed, sufficient in number, and that provision is made to get at the end of the suction pipes in case of fouling. No deck pump shall be passed which requires charging by hand before taking suction. When such is found to be the case, the Inspector shall insist upon proper provision being made to make the pump efficient at all times. Fire hose should be stretched to their length and thoroughly examined and tried under pressure from the pumps at least once a year, and at any other time the Inspector may deem necessary. The hose should be connected with the pumps for immediate use. Also, that efficient means are provided for relieving the bilges of water, as required by Section 25-61 Vict. Chap. 46; which means are to be noted in the office inspection book.

Sec. 24. A spare tiller shall be provided, with relieving tackles, to be kept near the after-steering gear, ready for immediate use on sea-going steamers and steamers on the great lakes. The steering gear shall be inspected and thoroughly examined at least once a year.

Sec. 25. Inspectors of hulls must be careful to see that every seagoing steamer, subject to the Act, and every steamer employed on the great lakes, is provided with suitable chain cables, anchors and ground tackle, in good condition sufficient for the service in which the vessel is employed, and so placed as to be handled in the most expeditious manner, and that the cable is removed from the lockers at least once in a year and cleaned, if necessary, and the pins knocked out of the shackles.

Sec. 26. (a.) Inspectors of hulls shall keep an office register book for new steamers in which they shall enter particulars of their registration, official number, name, port of registry, dimensions, tonnage, ownership, and names of masters; also a general description of build, showing a sketch of the midship section, giving sizes of frames, planking, deck beams, clamps, knees, covering boards and fastenings, as the case may be, sufficient to judge of the vessel and the fitness for the route on which it is to be placed. A description of the upper works on passenger steamers shall also be given stating how the same are secured to the hull, and what provision is made against rolling in a heavy sea.

(b.) The trim of the vessel, light and loaded, shall be shown on the sketch of the midship section.

(c.) The fitness of the boats and other equipments for saving life, whether sufficient for the number of passengers the steamer is allowed to carry, together with the crew on the route she is to be placed, shall also be given in the said particulars. A copy of these particulars in full made out neatly on foolscap paper shall be sent to the Chairman of the Board of Steamboat Inspection and shall be filed for reference in the office for the information of the Department of Marine.

Sec. 27. (a.) Each Inspector of hulls will also keep an office docking hook, in which he shall enter the date of last docking of each steamer inspected by him, with particulars of repairs made upon her; also memoranda of her last inspection, as made by him; the condition in which he then found the hull and equipment; with copy of any correspondence between the owner and master, relating to any repairs, fittings, equipment or other things which may require proof, in the event of their not having been complied with.

(b.) Inspectors of hulls shall not consider their duty as finished, in respect to a steamboat for which they have granted a certificate for a year or any shorter period, but are expected by the Department to have supervision over all steamboats subject to the Act, within, or coming within their district. Should any infractions of the law on the part of an owner or master of steamboats come to the knowledge of an Inspector, whereby the safety of life or property is endangered, it will be his duty at once to cause steps to prevent such occurrence by reporting the case to the Department of Marine, with the grounds of the complaint.

Passengers.

Sec. 28. (a.) The number of passengers allowed on passenger steamers may be found, by multiplying the length, by the breadth of the vessel at the water line, (in feet) and dividing the product by a factor of safety, according to the class of vessel, thus:—

For ocean steamers the factor shall be.....	10
For ocean coasting steamers	10
For steamers navigating in the great lakes	9
For lake coasting, harbour, river, ferry and excursion steamers	6

(b.) No deviation shall be made from this regulation unless with the consent of the Chairman of the Board of Steamboat Inspection and with the approval of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

(c.) In excursion steamers carrying passengers within the hold of the vessel, the limit shall be at the discretion of the Inspector, but in no case shall exceed as many as can find accommodation.

(d.) These factors may be increased to a further limit, if from age or unfitness, the vessel is not considered safe for the carriage of so many passengers.

(e.) Where for any reason false sides are added to the hull of a steamer, the breadth at water line on such steamer for estimating the number of passengers; if in the opinion of the inspector with approval of the Chairman, the additional breadth of one false side at water line may be added to the original breadth, or whatever portion of same they may deem advisable.

PART VIII.

RULES AND REGULATIONS RESPECTING THE INSPECTION OF BOATS, LIFE-PRESERVERS AND OTHER LIFE-SAVING APPLIANCES, TO BE CARRIED ON STEAMBOATS OR OTHER VESSELS, UNDER THE AUTHORITY OF THE STEAMBOAT INS- PECTION ACT AND AMEND- MENTS THERETO.

Boats for Great Lakes and Other Inland Waters.

Sec. 1. The following provisions shall be observed with respect to boats to be carried on steamboats:—

(a.) No steamboat with passengers on board shall proceed to sea from any port or place in Canada, or depart from any port or place, or ply on any of the Lakes St. John, Memphremagog, Ontario, Erie Huron or Georgian Bay, Simcoe, Superior, or Lake of the Woods, or on the River St. Lawrence, or on the Rivers Ottawa or St. John, or any lake or river in Manitoba, British Columbia, or the North-west Territories, or the District of Keewatin, except as hereinafter provided;—

(b.) Unless there are on board thereof, or attached to such steamboat, good, suitable, sufficient and properly equipped boats in good condition, each being not less than seventeen feet length over all, five feet breadth of beam, and one foot nine inches inside depth, with sufficient oars not less than four, and other necessary tackle;

Which boats shall be in the following proportion to the registered tonnage of such steamboat, that is to say:—

At least one boat for every steamboat of fifty tons and less;

At least two boats for every steamboat over fifty tons, but less than (300) three hundred tons;

At least three boats for every steamboat of three hundred tons and upwards; and if such steamboat is twenty five tons or less registered tonnage, she shall carry one good boat of the size and description, and equipped in the manner approved of in each case by the Inspector; the least dimensions permissible, to be fourteen feet long, four feet breadth of beam, and eighteen inches depth inside.

Steamboats of three hundred tons registered tonnage, and upwards, plying on the lakes Ontario, Erie, Huron, Superior, Georgian Bay, or River St. Lawrence below Isle Verte, or similar waters; the dimensions of boats to be not less than twenty-two feet length over all, six feet breadth of beam, by two feet six inches inside depth, and having at least six oars and other necessary tackle.

(c.) If such steamboat is of the registered tonnage of one hundred tons, or upwards to two hundred tons, unless in addition to the boats hereinbefore required, there is on board thereof or attached thereto:—

One good and sufficient life-boat, which life-boat may be considered of sufficient capacity if made of the following dimensions: length over all, eighteen feet, breadth of beam outside five feet, two inches depth from top of keel to top of gunwale at bottom of rowlock, two feet two inches, or—

(d.) If such steamboat is over the registered tonnage of two hundred tons or upwards to three hundred tons, one good and sufficient life-boat which life-boat may be considered of sufficient capacity if made of the following dimensions: length over all twenty-two feet, breadth of beam outside six feet, depth from top of keel to top of gunwale at bottom of rowlocks, two feet six inches. Or, two good and sufficient life boats of eighteen feet length, as aforesaid described.

(e.) If such steamboat is over the registered tonnage of three hundred tons or upwards to six hundred tons, two good and sufficient life boats of twenty-two feet as aforesaid mentioned, and for every three hundred tons upwards, an additional twenty-two foot life-boat to be added.

Sec. 2. Every life-boat shall be made of suitable metal, in thickness not less than No. 18 wire gauge, or of wood, and built whaleboat form, with a shear of about $\frac{3}{4}$ inch to 1 foot length from midships, rising equally to the stern and stern, with sufficient air-tight compartments in the ends and sides made of suitable metal or of wood, and so constructed as to be air-tight and serviceable, the air-tight compartments to have a capacity in cubic feet of one-tenth the capacity of the life-boat, which is found by multiplying the length and breadth outside, and the depth inside from bottom of rowlocks, or top of gunwale in feet, and by '6, the result equals the cubic feet required in the inside and outside compartments, about one-half of which should be on the outside; and dividing by 10, gives the number of persons the life-boat shall be deemed fit to carry. Solid cork may be used instead of air-tight compartments on the outside, 1'25 cubic feet of cork being considered equal to 1 cubic foot of air case.

(a.) Zinc shall not be used in the construction of a life-boat or of her air-tight compartments, which must be of a metal approved by the Board of Steamboat Inspection, or by the Chairman.

(b.) The air-tight compartments must be so distributed as to give the boat good buoyancy and stability; whether a part of the air-tight buoyancy apparatus should be under the thwarts, or whether it should be in the ends and along the sides, will be, so long as an efficient life-boat is obtained, left to the opinion of the maker or owner, but the Inspector must be satisfied that the life-boat is efficient.

(c.) Spaces filled with or containing any material are not to be deemed air spaces.

(d.) A square stern boat is not to be passed as a life-boat and all boats intended for use of life saving purpose on steamboats employed on the waters specified in sub. sec. (b.) section 1, shall be built whale-boat fashion.

(e.) Suitable life-lines with sustaining buoys shall be securely attached to the sides or gunwales of the life-boats.

Sec. 3. The life-boats and other boats intended for life saving purposes must be provided with the full complement of oars, one for each rowlock, and two spare oars, all securely lashed inside ready for use.

(a.) With two plugs for each plug hole, attached with lanyards or chains, and one and one-half sets of thole pins or crutches attached to the boat by lanyards and ready to slip in place.

(b.) With a rudder and tiller, or yoke and yoke lines, a painter of sufficient length to reach from the davits to the boat in the water and to tow her, a bailer, a hatchet in each end of boat, and a boat-hook, each attached to the boat with a good sound lanyard.

(c.) Means for detaching quickly the boats from the lower blocks of the davits must be provided, an ordinary fixed hook in the lower block shall not be allowed, the boat's davits must be strong enough and so spaced that the boat can be swung out readily, so that the boat's chocks can be readily removed, and that the boat will not foul the ship's sides in lowering when the ship has no list, and that the whole of the tackling, davits, falls, blocks, eye-bolts, and apparatus are of sufficient strength to lower the boat in safety with its full complement of crew and equipments; the boat's falls are to be long enough to lower the boat into the water with safety, when the vessel is light.

Sec. 4. Every boat shall be kept in good condition, watertight, with suitable covers and ready for immediate use; when wood is used as fuel for heating the boilers of high-pressure (non-condensing) steamboats, the covers of such boats shall be made of wood covered with zinc; and every boat shall have the name of the steamboat to which it belongs, and the name of her port of registry, legibly painted on her bows and stern.

Sec. 5. Every such steamboat shall be provided with sufficient means for lowering from on board safely and expeditiously the boats hereinbefore required to be on board of or attached to such steamboat; and masters of steamboats shall detail their crews and exercise them in lowering and handling the said boats, and life-boats at least once a week, alternately.

Sec. 6. Every such boat shall be hung in separate davits, with lowering apparatus complete and ready for instant lowering; provided, that in any case where any such steamboat carries two life-boats, one of the other boats may be carried on the hurricane deck without davits.

Sec. 7. Steamboats employed in the carriage of freight on the great lakes or similar waters, shall be required to have on board or attached to such steamboat, two boats as prescribed in sub-sec. (b), sec. 1, and if required one of those boats may be square sterned; and if carrying a limited number of passengers not exceeding in number twenty-five, shall be required to have in addition, one life boat as described in sub-sections c, d, and e, sec. 1.

Sec. 8. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries may authorize the use in individual, specified cases, of a greater or less number of boats, or of different dimensions from those hereinbefore specified, and upon such authorization being granted, it shall be sufficient for any such steamboat to carry and be provided with boats of the dimensions specified in such authorization.

Sec. 9. Steamboats confined to the navigation of the River St. John above Fredericton, the waters in the district of Muskoka, the County of Victoria, and the County of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario, and the waters of the Ottawa River and its tributaries above the City of Ottawa, including Rideau Canal, or the lakes or rivers not exceeding one mile in width at any point on the route of such steamboat, and which are employed in the carriage of passengers, shall carry at least one good boat as prescribed in section 1 (b) provided with four oars, and if such steamboat is twenty-five tons or less registered tonnage, the least dimensions of boat to be not less than forty cubic feet capacity.

Sec. 10. Every steamboat employed in the carriage of passengers, and used only in the navigation of rivers or inland waters, other than the rivers and inland waters hereinbefore provided for, shall, if such steamboat exceeds one hundred and fifty tons registered tonnage, carry at least two good boats as prescribed in section 1 (b), provided with four oars each; and if such steamboat does not exceed one hundred and fifty tons and is not less than twenty-five tons registered tonnage, she shall not be required to carry more than one such boat; and if such steamboat is less than twenty-five tons registered tonnage, she shall carry one good boat of the size and description, and equipped in the manner approved of in each case by the Inspector.

Sec. 11. Every steamboat not employed in the carriage of passengers, and every steamboat to which the foregoing provisions of the preceding sections do not apply, shall at all times, when the crew thereof is on board, be provided with and have on board or attached to such steamboat in some convenient place, a good, suitable and sufficient boat, or good, suitable and sufficient boats, in good condition and properly equipped, and provided with oars in sufficient number and other necessary tackle, and of sufficient capacity to carry all the crew of such steamboat, and with sufficient means for lowering such boat or boats from on board safely and expeditiously; and freight, canal and tug steamers, less than fifty gross tons may be equipped with boats, or rafts when boats cannot be utilized, as in the opinion of the Inspector may be necessary in case of disaster, to secure the safety of all on board.

Sec. 12. The carrying capacity in the number of persons for boats shall be determined by multiplying the length over all by the breadth outside, and by the depth inside from top of keel to gunwale in feet, and 1 by '6, and divide by eight, the quotient being the number of persons allowed to each boat. If the oars are pulled in rowlocks, the bottom of the rowlock is to be considered the gunwale of the boat for ascertaining her depth.

(a.) In carrying these instructions into effect, Inspectors are to be careful not to interfere unnecessarily with boats supplied previous to 1904 in accordance with the rules of 1897, but in the case of new boats coming under survey for the first time, as well as in all cases in which the fittings, or the boats require renewal, the rules contained in these instructions are to be strictly adhered to. This also applies to the other equipments required on board the steamboat.

Life-Rafts and Life-Buoys.

Sec. 13. Life-rafts must be approved by the Board of Steamboat Inspection before the number of persons they may be allowed to carry can be determined, provided that not less than three cubic feet of strong serviceable inclosed air-tight compartments, constructed so that water cannot find its way into them, shall be the amount of air space to each person carried on the raft.

Sec. 14. Approved buoyant apparatus must not require to be inflated before use; shall be of approved construction, and marked in such a way as to plainly indicate the number of adult persons it can carry.

The buoyancy of such apparatus for the number of persons to be carried may be ascertained by dividing the number of pounds of iron it is capable of supporting in fresh water by 32.

Sec. 15. An approved life-buoy may be built of solid cork capable of floating in the water for at least 24 hours with 32 pounds of iron suspended from it; or—

(a.) A strong life-buoy of any other approved pattern and material, provided that it is capable of floating in the water for at least 24 hours with 32 pounds of iron suspended from it, and provided that it is not stuffed with rushes, cork shavings or other shavings, or loose granulated cork or other loose material, and does not require inflation before use. There must not be a less number than two life-buoys on each passenger steamboat carrying by law two boats, with good line of suitable length attached to each buoy and kept at all times ready for instant use.

(b.) The air cases for life-rafts are not to exceed the length approved by the Board (four feet), with hooked, hammered and soldered joints, or riveted, and if made of iron to be galvanized, to be substantially inclosed with wood to be close jointed.

The covering of the air cases in boats should be fastened with brass screws so they can be readily taken off to examine the air cases.

Collapsible boats may be used if approved by an Inspector, with the consent of the Chairman.

Sec. 16. No new pattern of or material in life-boats, life-rafts or life-buoys is to be passed unless approved by the Board of Steamboat Inspection.

Life-Preservers.

Sec. 17. Every steamboat not exempt from the provisions of The Steamboat Inspection Act, shall before proceeding to sea from any port or place in Canada, or to ply on any of the waters of Canada, be provided with and carry on board thereof on every such voyage, one life preserver (life belt) for each person on board including the crew.

Sec. 18. Each of such life-preservers (life-belts) shall be capable of floating in fresh water for 24 hours with 15 pounds of iron suspended from it. It shall be cut out at least 2 inches under the arm pits, properly rounded, and fitted so as to remain securely in its place when put on, with shoulder straps, and waist belt, of cotton line or other material, approved by the Inspector. When any other material than solid cork is used for buoyancy it must first be specially approved by the Board of Steamboat Inspection, and the life-preservers (life-belts) shall at all times be kept in convenient and accessible places in the state rooms or on the deck of such steamboat, under cover and in readiness for immediate use, the places where kept to be marked so that their position may be known to those for whom they are intended.

Sec. 19. A cork jacket with shoulder straps and waist lines for fastening the same around the body, or such other description of life-preservers as the Governor in Council may approve, shall be the form of life-preserver to be used on steamboats.

Passenger Barges, Towed.

Sec. 20. Any barge, boat, bateau, scow, or undecked vessel having passengers on board, towed by a steamboat, before being granted a certificate of inspection, must be equipped with a boat or boats, life-preservers, life-buoys, and life-rafts, or any or all of the equipment named in this section in addition to the equipment named in The Steamboat Inspection Act; to the satisfaction of the Steamboat Inspector who inspects her, who shall require her to be equipped with suitable life-saving equipment for the waters on which she is to ply, as well as suitable private conveniences or closets for the use of the passengers.

BOATS AND LIFE-SAVING APPLIANCES TO BE CARRIED ON STEAMSHIPS NAVIGATING THE OCEAN.

DIVISION (A)—CLASS 1.

Rules for sea-going Steamships having a certificate to carry Passengers.

Sec. 21. (a.) Ships of Division (A) Class 1, shall carry boats placed under davits, fit and ready for use, and having proper appliances for getting them into the water, in number and capacity as prescribed by the Table in these Rules (see section 37); such boats shall be equipped in the manner required by, and shall be of the description defined in, the General Rules appended hereto.

(b) Masters or owners of ships of this class claiming to carry fewer boats under davits than are given in the table must declare before the collector or other officers of Customs, at the time of clearance, that the boats actually placed under davits are sufficient to accommodate all persons on board, allowing 10 (ten) cubic feet of boat capacity for each adult person, or "statute adult."

(c) Not less than half the number of boats placed under davits, having at least half the cubic capacity required by the tables shall be boats of section (a), or section (b). The remaining boats may also be of such description, or may, in the option of the shipowner, conform to section (c), or section (d), provided that not more than two boats shall be of section (d).

(d.) If the boats placed under davits in accordance with the table do not furnish sufficient accommodation for all persons on board, then additional wood, metal, collapsible or other boats of approved description (whether placed under davits or otherwise), or approved life-rafts, shall be carried. One of these boats may be a steam launch; but in that case the space occupied by the engines and boilers is not to be included in the estimated cubic capacity of the boat.

Subject to the provisions contained in paragraph (f) of these rules, such additional boats or rafts shall be of at least such carrying capacity that they and the boats required to be placed under davits by the table provide together in the aggregate, in vessels of 5,000 tons gross and upwards, three-fourths, and in vessels of less than 5,000 tons gross, one-half, more than minimum cubic contents required by column 3 of that table. For this purpose 3 cubic feet of air case in the life-raft is to be estimated as 10 cubic feet of internal capacity. Provided always that the rafts will accommodate all the persons for which they are to be certified under the rules, and also have 3 cubic feet of air case for each person.

All such additional boats or rafts shall be placed as conveniently for being available as the ship's arrangements admit of, having regard to the avoidance of undue encumbrance of the ship's deck, and to the safety of the ship for her voyage.

(e.) In addition to the life-saving appliances before mentioned, ships of this Class shall carry not less than one approved life-buoy for every boat placed under davits. They shall also carry approved life-belts or other similar approved articles of equal buoyancy suitable for being worn on the person, so that there may be at least one for each person on board the ship.

(f.) Provided nevertheless that no ship of this class shall be required to carry more boats or rafts than will furnish sufficient accommodation for all persons on board.

DIVISION (B).—CLASS 1.

Rules for Sea-going or Coasting Steam Ships having Passenger Certificates authorizing them to carry Passengers within certain specified Limits.

Sec. 22. (a.) Ships of this class shall, according to their tonnage, carry boats placed under davits, as required by the Table (Section 37).

(b.) Masters or owners of ships of this class claiming to carry fewer boats under davits than are given in the Table must declare before the collector or other officer of Customs that the boats actually placed under davits are sufficient to accommodate all persons on board, allowing 10 (ten) cubic feet of boat capacity for each adult person, or "statute adult." Not less than half the number of boats placed under davits, having at least half the cubic capacity required by the Tables, shall be of boats of Section (A) or Section (B). The remaining boats may also be of such description, or may, in the option of the shipowners, conform to Section (C) or Section (D), provided that not more than two boats shall be of Section (D).

(c.) If the boats placed under davits in accordance with the above requirements do not furnish sufficient accommodation for all persons on board, then additional wood, metal, collapsible, or other boats of approved description (whether placed under davits or otherwise), or approved life-rafts, or approved buoyant deck seats, or other approved buoyant deck fittings, shall be carried of at least such cubical capacity that they and the boats required to be placed under davits by the Table provide together in the aggregate one-half more than the minimum cubic contents provided by column 3 of the Table. For this purpose 3 cubic feet of air case in the life-raft is to be estimated as 10 cubic feet of internal capacity; provided always that the rafts will accommodate the persons for which they are certified under the Rules, and also have 3 cubic feet of air case for each person.

(d.) Ships of this Class shall also carry approved life-belts or other similar approved articles of equal buoyancy suitable for being worn on the person, so that there may be at least one for each person on board the ship.

(e.) At least one approved life-buoy shall also be provided for each boat of wood or metal carried by the ship, but in no case shall less than six approved life-buoys be provided.

(f.) Provided nevertheless that no ship of this class shall be required to carry more boats, rafts, and other buoyant deck fittings than will furnish sufficient accommodation for all persons on board.

DIVISION (A).—CLASS 2.

Rules for Foreign Sea-going or Coasting Steam Ships not certified to carry Passengers.

Sec. 23. (a.) Ships of this Class shall carry, on each side at least so many and such boats of wood or metal placed under davits (of which one on one side shall be a boat of Section (A), or Section (B), and on the other side shall be a boat of Section (A), or Section (B), or Section (C)), that the boats on each side of the ship shall be sufficient to accommodate all persons on board.

(b.) They shall carry approved life-belts, so that there may be one for each person carried on board the ship.

(c.) They shall carry not less than four approved life-buoys.

In the case of small steam ships a discretion may be exercised by the Inspector to modify the requirements as to boats with consent of the Chairman.

DIVISION (B).—CLASS 2.

Steam Fish Carriers, Tug Boats, and Steam Lighters which proceed to Sea.

Sec. 24. (a.) Ships of this Class shall carry one boat of Sections (A), (B), or (C), so fitted that it can be readily put out on either side of the ship, and amply sufficient to carry all the persons on board.

(b.) They shall carry two approved life-buoys.

(c.) They shall carry life-belts, so that there may be one for each person on board the ship.

GENERAL RULES.

Sec. 25. (1.) All boats shall be constructed and properly equipped as provided by these Rules, and all boats and other life-saving appliances are to be kept ready for use to the satisfaction of the Inspector. Internal buoyancy apparatus may be constructed of wood, or of copper or yellow metal, of not less than 18 oz. to the superficial foot or of other durable material.

Section (A).—A boat of this section shall be a life-boat, of whale-boat form, properly constructed of wood or metal, having for every 10 cubic feet of her capacity, computed as in Rule (2), at least 1 cubic foot of strong and serviceable inclosed air-tight compartments, so constructed that water cannot find its way into them. In the case of metal boats an addition will have to be made to the cubic capacity of the air-tight compartments, so as to give them buoyancy equal to that of the wooden boat.

Section (B).—A boat of this section shall be a life-boat of whale-boat form, properly constructed of wood or metal, having inside and outside buoyancy apparatus together equal in efficiency to the buoyancy apparatus provided for a boat of Section (A). At least one-half of the buoyancy apparatus must be attached to the outside of the boat.

Section (C).—A boat of this section shall be a life-boat properly constructed of wood or metal, having some buoyancy apparatus attached to the inside and (or) outside of the boat equal in efficiency to one-half of the buoyancy apparatus provided for a boat of section (A) or section (B). At least one-half of the buoyancy apparatus must be attached to the outside of the boat.

Section (D).—A boat of this section shall be a properly constructed boat of wood or metal.

Section (E).—A boat of this section shall be a boat of approved construction, form and material, and may be collapsible.

Sec. 26. (2.) The cubic capacity of a boat shall be deemed to be her cubic capacity, ascertained (as in measuring ships for tonnage capacity) by Stirling's rule; but as the application of that rule entails much labour, the following simple plan, which is approximately accurate, may be adopted for general purposes, and when no question requiring absolute correct adjustment is raised:—

Measure the length and breadth outside and the depth inside. Multiply them together and by '6; the product is the capacity of the boat in cubic feet. Thus a boat 28 ft. long, 8 ft. 6 in. broad, and 3 ft. 6 in. deep, will be regarded as having a capacity of $28 \times 8.5 \times 3.5 \times 6 = 499.8$, or 500 cubic feet. If the oars are pulled in rowlocks, the bottom of the rowlock is to be considered the gunwale of the boat for ascertaining her depth.

Sec. 27. (3.) The number of persons a boat of section (A.) shall be deemed fit to carry shall be the number of cubic feet ascertained as in rule (2) divided by 10.

The number of persons a boat of section (B), section (C), section (D), or section (E), shall be deemed fit to carry shall be the number of cubic feet ascertained as in rule (2) divided by 8. The space in the boat shall be sufficient for the seating of the persons carried in it, and for the proper use of the oars.

Sec. 28. (4.) Appliances for getting a boat into the water must fulfil the following conditions:—Means are to be provided for speedily, but not necessarily simultaneously or automatically, detaching the boats from the lower blocks of the davit tackles; the boats placed under davits are to be attached to the davit tackles and kept ready for service; the davits are to be strong enough and so spaced that the boats can be swung out with facility; the points of attachment of the boats to the davits are to be sufficiently away from the ends of the boats to ensure their being easily swung clear of the davits; the boat's chocks are to be such as can be expeditiously removed; the davits, falls, blocks, eyebolts, rings, and the whole of the tackling are to be of sufficient strength; the boat's falls are to be long enough to lower the boat into the water with safety when the vessel is light. The life-lines shall be fitted to the davits, and be long enough to reach the water when the vessel is light; and hooks are not to be attached to the lower tackle blocks.

Sec. 29. (5.) In order to be properly equipped each boat shall be provided as follows:—

(a.) With the full single-banked complement of oars, and two spare oars.

(b.) With two plugs for each plug-hole, attached with lanyards or chains, and one set and a half of thole pins or crutches, attached to the boat by sound lanyards.

(c.) With a sea-anchor, a bailer, a rudder and a tiller, or yoke and yoke lines, a painter of sufficient length, and a boat-hook. The rudder and bailer to be attached to the boat by sufficiently long lanyards, and kept ready for use. In boats where there may be a difficulty in fitting a rudder a steering oar may be provided instead.

(d.) A vessel to be kept filled with fresh water shall be provided for each boat.

(e.) Life-rafts shall be fully provided with a suitable approved equipment.

Sec. 30. (6.) In order to be properly equipped, each boat of sections (A) and (B), in addition to being provided with all the requisites laid down in rule (5), shall be equipped as follows, but not more than four boats in any one ship require to have this outfit, and where boats of sections (A) or (B) are carried in lieu of boats of sections (C) or (D), this additional outfit need not be insisted on:—

(a.) With two hatchets or tomahawks, one to be kept in each end of the boat, and to be attached to the boat by a lanyard.

(b.) With a mast or masts, and with at least one good sail, and proper gear for each.

(c.) With a line beckett round the outside of the boat and securely made fast.

(d.) With an efficient compass.

(e.) With one gallon of vegetable or animal oil, and a vessel of an approval pattern, for distributing it in the water in rough weather.

(f.) With a lantern trimmed, with oil in its receiver sufficient to burn eight hours.

Sec. 31. (7.) The number of persons that any approved life-raft for use at sea shall be deemed to be capable of carrying shall be determined with reference to each separate pattern approved by the Board of Steamboat Inspection; provided always, that for every person so carried there shall be at least three cubic feet of strong and serviceable inclosed air-tight compartments, constructed so that water cannot find its way into them. Any approved life-raft of other construction may be used, provided that it has equivalent buoyancy to that hereinbefore described. Every such approved life-raft shall be marked in such a way as to plainly indicate the number of adult persons it can carry.

Sec. 32. (8.) Approved buoyant apparatus shall be deemed sufficient, so far as buoyancy is concerned, for a number of persons, to be ascertained by dividing the number of pounds of iron which it is capable of supporting in fresh water by 32. Such buoyant apparatus shall not require to be inflated before use, shall be of approved construction, and marked in such a way as plainly to indicate the number of persons for whom it is sufficient.

Sec. 33. (9.) An approved life-belt shall mean a belt which does not require to be inflated before use, and which is capable at least of floating in the water for 24 hours with 15 lbs. of iron suspended from it. Life-belts are to be cut out 2 inches under the armpits, and fitted so as to remain securely in their place when put on.

- Sec. 34. (10.) An approved life-buoy shall mean either—
 (a.) A life-buoy built of solid cork, capable of floating in the water for at least 24 hours with 32 lbs. of iron suspended from it; or
 (b.) A strong life-buoy of any other approved pattern or material, provided that it is capable of floating in the water for at least 24 hours with 32 lbs. of iron suspended from it, and provided also that it is not stuffed with rushes, cork shavings, or other shavings, or loose granulated cork, or other loose material, and does not require inflation before use.

All life-buoys shall be fitted with beackets securely seized, and not less than two of them shall be fitted with life-lines 15 fathoms in length.

Sec. 35. (11.) All life-buoys and life-belts shall be so placed as to be readily accessible to all persons on board, and so that their position may be known to those for whom they are intended.

Sec. 36. (12.) When ships of any class are divided into efficient water-tight compartments to the satisfaction of the Steamboat Inspector with approval of Chairman, they shall only be required to carry additional boats, rafts, and buoyant apparatus of one-half of the capacity required by these Rules, but the exemption shall not extend to life-jackets or similar approved articles of equal buoyancy suitable to be worn on the person.

NOTE.—Where in ships already fitted the required cubic contents of boats placed under davits is provided, although by a smaller number of boats than the minimum required by this table, such ships shall be regarded as complying with the rules as to boats to be carried under davits.

In the case of vessels under 200 tons gross tonnage the capacity of any boat to be supplied should not be less than 125 cubic feet. If, however, in any case this rule be found to be impracticable, a discretion may then be exercised by the Inspector, with approval of Chairman.

In cases where a small vessel is unable to carry more than one boat, a discretion may be exercised by the Inspector, with approval of Chairman, but whenever one boat only is carried there must be proper provision to enable it to be placed readily in the water on either side of the ship.

INSTRUCTIONS AS TO INTERPRETATION OF RULES RESPECTING LIFE-SAVING APPLIANCES.

Sec. 38. As regards the boats of Sections A, B, C and D, Section 25, the Inspector will see that the requirements of the rules are observed, and that the capacity of the boats, and the number of persons they are fit to carry, are ascertained by Rules 2 and 3, Sections 26 and 27. In measuring boats the length and breadth are to be regarded as the extreme dimensions measured to the outside of the plank. The number of persons for which a boat is to be passed is, however, subject to the further condition that the space in the boat shall be sufficient for the seating of them all, and the proper use of the oars. That this requirement is fulfilled must be ascertained by actual experiment in all cases before a declaration is granted, unless one or more boats in a ship are of the same pattern, when one only of such boats needs be so tested. Life-boats (except those of Section C) should be built whale-boat fashion, both ends alike. In ships which have been fitted with boats previous to the rules coming into force, square-sterned boats need not be condemned if fitted with the required amount of buoyancy, but all life-boats of Sections A and B subsequently supplied or supplied to new ships must be built whale-boat fashion. All collapsible boats, and all boats whether collapsible or not, if constructed of any material other than wood or metal, must be in accordance with a pattern approved by the Board of Steamboat Inspection before they are passed as a portion of the life-saving appliances required by the rules.

Sec. 39. All boats required by the rules to be placed under davits are to be kept fit and ready for use, and when they are swung inboard and resting on the chocks, the chocks are to be so constructed that the boat can be at once swung outboard without requiring to be lifted by the tackles—i.e., it should not be necessary to do more than take the weight of the boat.

The manner in which the additional boats not requiring to be placed under davits are to be stowed will vary in different ships, but they must be stowed to the satisfaction of the Inspectors, so as to be as readily available for use as is practicable, having due consideration to the circumstances mentioned in the rules.

Sec. 40. The equipments of all boats are provided for in the rules, and Inspectors are to see that the requirements are carefully complied with. The painters for boats are not to be less than 20 fathoms in length.

When the rules require a life-boat of Section C to be carried, and owners choose to provide a boat of Section A or Section B, the additional equipment required by general Rule 6 for boats of Section A and Section B need not be insisted on.

In some of the collapsible boats it is difficult to fit a rudder; in this case a steering oar properly fitted may be passed instead.

The buoyancy of life-boats of Section B must be partly inside and partly outside the boat, and a boat in which it is wholly inside or wholly outside should not be passed as a boat of Section B.

In the case of life-boats of Section C, one half the buoyancy must be outside the boat; the remainder may be either inside or outside, or partly inside and partly outside.

The inside buoyancy for boats of Sections A, B, and C, must consist of strong and serviceable inclosed air-tight compartments, such that water cannot find its way into them.

The outside buoyancy for boats of Section B must consist of solid cork covered with canvas, and painted and attached to the outer skin of the boat to the satisfaction of the Inspectors, both as regards its position and also as regards its attachment. No other material is to be used unless expressly sanctioned by the Steamboat Inspection. The outside buoyancy must be equal to at least half the buoyancy required for boats of Section A, and the inside and outside buoyancy together must equal in efficiency the buoyancy required for a boat of Section A.

To effect this 1.25 cubic feet of cork is to be considered as equivalent to 1 cubic foot of air-case.

The foregoing remarks apply to outside buoyancy for boats of Section C, excepting that the total buoyancy is only required to be half that of boats of Section A or Section B. When the solid cork is not permanently attached to the side of a boat in such a manner that moisture cannot collect between the two surfaces, it will require to be removed every time a declaration is granted to ascertain (1) whether the cork is becoming sodden; (2) whether moisture is collecting between the cork and the skin of the boat, and in that way rotting the wood. The consideration (2) will not apply to metal boats.

Sec. 41. Air-cases are required by the rules to be constructed of wood, or of copper or yellow metal of not less than 18 oz. to the superficial foot, or of other durable material.

The average weight of 18 oz. copper air-cases is about 5 lbs. per cubic foot, and if air-cases of other material exceed this weight the cubic capacity of the air-cases must be correspondingly increased.

As yellow metal in time becomes extremely brittle, copper is far preferable. Zinc is not durable material, and should not be passed; neither should galvanized iron or steel cases be passed for new boats.

A note should be made in each district of all ships whose boats are already fitted with galvanized iron or steel air-cases, with a view to their being frequently inspected. Steel or iron air-cases previously passed of less thickness than 21 oz. are not to be rejected so long as they continue in good condition.

Copper and yellow metal air-cases are to be made with proper hook joints not less than three-eighths of an inch in width, hammered well down and soldered, and no other joint is to be passed unless specially approved by the Board of Steamboat Inspection.

The cases are not to exceed four feet in length; they are to be substantially enclosed with wool, which is to be close-jointed, so as to cover any exposed part of the air-case, and the wool forming the top is not to be less than one inch in thickness.

The coverings in the boats over the air-cases should be secured with brass screws, so as to enable the cases to be removed without difficulty for examination.

Spaces filled with or containing any material are not to be deemed air-spaces unless specially approved by the Board of Steamboat Inspection.

Copper or yellow metal air-cases must not be carried in contact with the skin of the metal boats.

Where boats not required by the rules to be fitted with air-cases are so fitted, as, for instance, in some of the collapsible or semi-collapsible boats, these provisions as to air-cases need not be insisted upon.

Sec. 42. In the case of launches or other boats propelled by steam power which are carried as part of the additional boat equipment required by the rules made under the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act, an inspection of the boat, machinery, and boilers, and of the mounting and fitting thereof, should be made. Steam launches must not be passed as part of the boat equipment required to be under davits.

In the case of any vessel provided with a steam launch or boat in addition to the boat capacity required under the rules, the Inspector need not interfere unless they have reason to believe that there is some defect in the boat, machinery, or boiler, or in the fittings or arrangements thereof, which might be dangerous to life.

Sec. 43. In carrying these instructions into effect, Inspectors are to be careful not to interfere unnecessarily with boats supplied before November, 1904, but in the case of new boats coming under survey for the first time, as well as in all cases in which the fittings of the boats require renewal, the rules contained in these instructions are to be strictly adhered to.

Sec. 44. The appliances for lowering boats must be in accordance with Rule 4 of the General Rules, and must, in the Inspectors' opinion, be such as not to endanger human life. They should be tested at each survey for renewal of a passenger certificate.

The question of determining whether the requirements of the Rules respecting appliances for lowering boats are complied with in the case of any particular kind of gear coming under the Inspector's notice shall be left to the Chairman.

In order to ensure uniformity of practice, each Inspector, who may pass any particular disengaging gear, should request the maker to supply 50 copies of the plans and specifications for distribution among the Inspectors in the several districts. These copies should be sent to the Chairman by the Inspector, together with his report upon the gear. No certificates of approval for disengaging gear will be issued.

The Inspector should also report to the Chairman when any particular disengaging gear has been inspected and deemed unsatisfactory or unsafe, and should explain fully in such report the details which, in his opinion, render it undesirable. No formal certificate of approval will, however, be granted by the Board of Steamboat Inspection or their officers for any special kind of gear.

No part of the gear which is intended to bear the weight of the boat must be made of cast metal.

Sec. 45. Life-rafts are to be approved by the Board of Steamboat Inspection; they are to be supplied with a suitable equipment to the satisfaction of the Inspector, and this must include a sea anchor, not less than 20 fathoms of hawser, and oars in proportion to the size of the raft.

The number of persons that any approved life-raft for use at sea is to be deemed capable of carrying is the number that the raft is able to seat safely, provided always that for every person so carried there are at least three cubic feet of strong and serviceable inclosed air-tight compartments.

Approved buoyant apparatus is to be deemed sufficient for a number of persons, to be ascertained by dividing the number of pounds of iron which it is capable of supporting in fresh water by 32, provided also that the sides and ends of the apparatus shall afford a space of one horizontal foot for each person for whom it is certified, and that a line for the people to cling to is properly becketted all round it. Such buoyant apparatus shall not require to be inflated before use, and shall be of approved construction.

Sec. 46. Inspectors will note that both rafts and buoyant apparatus shall be marked in such a way as to plainly indicate the number of adult persons for which they are deemed sufficient. As determined by the net cubic feet contents, as per ratio in sections 31 and 45, and no raft or buoyant apparatus is to be regarded as finally approved until so marked, in a firm, and legible manner.

Sec. 47. The instructions in the case of life-boats apply equally to life-rafts and buoyant apparatus, so far as the length, weight, and inclosure of the air-cases are concerned, excepting that as life-rafts and buoyant apparatus are only intended to be used in cases of extreme need, and are consequently not exposed to the same wear and tear as the life-boats, a minimum weight of 16 oz., copper or yellow metal, may be passed.

Sec. 48. No life-belt is to be passed that is not capable of floating in fresh water for 24 hours with 15 lbs. of iron suspended from it. It shall be cut out 2 inches under the arm-pits, and fitted so as to remain securely in its place when put on. When any other material than solid cork is used for buoyancy it must be specially approved by the Board of Steamboat Inspection. All new life-belts should be fitted with adjustable shoulder-straps.

Sec. 49. No life-buoy stuffed with rushes or with cork shavings or other shavings, or granulated cork, or any loose material is to be passed. All cork life-buoys are to be built of solid cork and fitted with lines becketted and securely seized to the life-buoy, and none are to be passed that will not float for 24 hours in fresh water with 32 lbs. of iron suspended from them. If life-buoys are not made of solid cork, the pattern and material must be approved by the Board of Steamboat Inspection. No contrivance is to be passed as a life-buoy that requires inflation before use. Life-buoys are to be secured by a toggle and becket, or any other similar method, so that they can be quickly released; they must not be lashed nor seized to the rail or any other part of the vessel, but must be kept so as to be ready for use at a moment's notice in case of an emergency.

Not less than two of the life-buoys, one on each side of the ship, are to be fitted with life-lines 15 fathoms in length.

Vessels for distributing oil are to be to the satisfaction of the Inspector, and are to be so constructed as to distribute the oil evenly and gradually on the surface of the water.

Sec. 50. The life-belts, life-buoys, and other buoyant apparatus should be carefully examined at every survey, when the Inspectors should satisfy themselves that the buoyant material has not become sodden, and that the straps and lines are sufficient. Special attention should be paid to the question of buoyancy in the case of any approved life-belt which is not constructed of solid cork.

Sec. 51. The full supply of life-saving appliances required for the maximum number of persons for which a declaration is granted must in all cases be on board at the time of the survey. If any of the appliances are removed when the vessel does not carry her full number of passengers, the responsibility must rest with the owner. When a reduction is made in the total number of passengers for whom accommodation is provided, on account of the insufficiency of the life-saving appliances, the actual reduced number of persons to be carried in each class should be stated in the declaration.

Sec. 52. In all cases in which claims are made for the exemption provided for by rule 12, section 36, for vessels which are divided into efficient water-tight compartments the Inspectors of the district should examine such of the bulkheads and the parts of the iron decks (or steps) which may be in combination with the bulkheads, for the purpose of either making the bulkhead complete in its height, or support; should also examine the water-tight doors, the doors through which coal is worked, the covers of other openings, the arrangements for closing all doors, and the index showing whether the door is closed. And should report to the Chairman, with full particulars, whether in their opinion such are efficient and satisfactory for the exemption claimed.

PART IX.

For Precautions against Fire.

1. Every steamboat employed in the carriage of passengers, whether by sea, bay, lake or river navigation, shall be provided with and have on board, in some convenient place, not less than twenty-five sufficient fire buckets of metal or leather, five axes, and six good and sufficient lanterns approved of by the Inspector: Provided always, that passenger steamboats of more than seventy-five, and less than one hundred and fifty tons gross shall not be required to be provided with and have on board a greater number of fire buckets than twelve, and that passenger steamboats of seventy-five tons gross and under, and steam tugs under one hundred and fifty tons gross, shall not be required to be provided with and have on board a greater number of fire buckets than six, or a greater number of axes than three.

2. Every steamboat not employed in the carriage of passengers and every steamboat to which the provisions of the next preceding section do not apply, shall be provided with and have on board, in convenient places, a number in due proportion to that of the crew of good and sufficient fire buckets of metal, leather or other suitable material, and of axes and lanterns to the satisfaction of the Inspector.

3. Every passenger steamboat shall have at least three double-acting forcing pumps, with chambers at least four inches in diameter with a stroke of not less than six inches, two to be worked by hand, and one by steam, if steam can be employed independently of and not worked by the main engine, otherwise, all three by hand,—one whereof shall be placed near the stern, one near the stem, and one amidship, each having a suitable well-fitted hose of at least two-thirds the length of the steamboat, with suitable nozzle attached and kept at all times in perfect order, clear of freight or other obstructions, with hose coupled and ready for immediate use; each pump and coupling shall be provided with a hose wrench chained to the pump, and each of the said pumps shall be supplied with water by a pipe connected therewith, and passing through the side of the steamboat, so low as to be at all times in the water when the boat is afloat.

4. In passenger steamboats not exceeding two hundred tons gross, two of such pumps may be dispensed with; if over two hundred tons, but not exceeding five hundred tons gross, one of such hand pumps may be dispensed with; but in such cases the hose shall be of such length as to reach easily to every part of the steamboat; and in passenger steamboats where only one pump is used, such pump shall be placed as directed by the Inspector.

5. In passenger steamboats under one hundred tons gross, one steam pump of suitable size, or if steam cannot be employed, one force pump of suitable size worked by hand, shall be sufficient.

6. In passenger steamboats not exceeding two hundred tons gross, requiring only one pump, such pump shall be placed aft, unless the space forward is kept free to admit of ready access to the pump and hose, in which case the pump may be placed forward.

7. All steam pumps shall be supplied with suitable bilge connection having proper rose or mud box attachments, and also a steam syphon, ejector or other suitable means with which to relieve the hold of water.

8. When it is found that a metal tube or tubes are fixed on any steamboat not less in diameter than the hose carried by such steamboat connected with a force pump or pumps and provided with suitable connections placed at not more than thirty feet from each other, or from either end of the steamboat, to which the hose carried by the steamboat can be readily attached, it shall not be necessary that the hose should be of greater length than will be sufficient to reach from some one of such connections to either end of the steamboat, and each connection shall be provided with a stop valve or stop cock with keys and hose wrench properly secured or chained to each stop valve or stop cock, or connection so that one or more of such hose attachments may be used as may be required.

9. Every passenger steamboat of more than sixty tons, registered tonnage, shall be provided with a steam pony pump that may be used as a fire engine, to be worked independently of the main engine; such steam pony pump shall be placed in a suitable place, near the engine-room convenient to the control of the engineer; and in all cases the pump hose shall be coupled to the pony and hand fire pumps, ready for immediate use in case of fire.

RULES RELATING TO THE INSPECTION OF STEAMBOAT SHAFTS.

Shafts.

Main, tunnel, propeller and paddle shafts should not be passed if less in diameter than that found by the following formulæ, without previously submitting the case to the Chairman of the Board of Steamboat Inspection. It will be found that first-class makers generally put in larger shafts than those obtained by the formulæ.

For compound condensing engines with two or more cylinders, when the cranks are not overhung:—

$$S = \sqrt[3]{\frac{C \times P \times D^2}{f \left(2 + \frac{D^2}{d^2}\right)}}$$

$$P = \frac{f \times S^3}{C \times D^2} \left(2 + \frac{D^2}{d^2}\right)$$

Where S = diameter of shaft in inches.

Where d^2 = square of diameter of high pressure cylinder in inches or sum of squares of diameters, when there are two or more high pressure cylinders.

Where D^2 = square of diameter of low pressure cylinder in inches or sum of squares of diameters, when there are two or more low pressure cylinders.

Where P = absolute pressure in lbs. per square inch, that is boiler pressure plus 15 lbs.

Where C = length of crank in inches.

Where f = constant from following table.

NOTE.—Intermediate pressure cylinders do not appear in the formulæ.

For ordinary condensing engines, with one, two, or more cylinders, when the cranks are not overhung:—

$$S = \sqrt[3]{\frac{C \times P \times D^2}{3 \times f}}$$

$$P = \frac{3 \times f \times S^3}{C \times D^2}$$

Where S = Diameter of shaft in inches.

D^2 = Square of diameter of cylinder in inches, or sum of squares of diameters when there are two or more cylinders.

P = Absolute pressure in lbs. per square inch, that is boiler pressure plus 15 lbs.

C = Length of crank in inches.

f = Constant from following table:—

The portion of the propeller shaft which is forward of the stern gland, and all the thrust shaft with the exception of the part enclosed in the thrust bearing, may be of the same diameter as the intermediate tunnel shafting.

RULES RELATING TO THE TESTING OF NEW ENGINES ON PASSENGER STEAMBOATS.

In the case of new engines on passenger steamboats, Inspectors should see them tested while under way, with full steam, in order to assure as far as possible that no flaws in the several parts of the engine have escaped the examination made by the Inspector, as provided by The Steamboat Inspection Act.

RULES FOR ESTIMATING THE NOMINAL HORSE-POWER OF MARINE ENGINES.

FOR ORDINARY CONDENSING ENGINES.

D = Diameter of Cylinder in inches.

N = Number of Cylinders.

Then $\frac{D^2 \times N}{30}$ = Nominal Horse Power.

FOR COMPOUND CONDENSING ENGINES.

D = Diameter of low pressure cylinder in inches.

d = Diameter of high pressure cylinder in inches.

N = Number of low pressure cylinders.

n = Number of high pressure cylinders.

Then $(D^2 \times N) + d^2 \times n$ = Nominal horse power.
